

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

THE JURISDICTION, PROCESS, PRACTICE,

AND

IN THE

Mayor's Court, London.

(COMMONLY CALLED THE "LORD MAYOR'S COURT.")

Founded on BRANDON.

BY GEORGE CANDY,

OF THE INNER TEMPLE, BARRISTER-AT-LAW.

LONDON:

STEVENS AND SONS, 119, CHANCERY LANE,

Law Publishers and Booksellers.

LONDON :
STEVENS AND RICHARDSON, PRINTERS, 5, GREAT QUEEN STREET, LINCOLN'S INN FIELDS, W.C.

PREFACE.

A VERY few words will explain the raison d'être of this little book. Mr. Brandon's "Epitome" of his Notes of Practice has been for some time out of print. Mr. Brandon, as one of the Judges of the Mayor's Court, not unnaturally feels that it would be inconsistent with the position he holds to publish a Practice of his own Court. In these circumstances he has very kindly accorded to the writer his permission to make free use of the materials to be found in the "Epitome," and of that permission every advantage has been taken. At the same time, although the book is—and is stated to be—"founded on" Mr. Brandon's work, it is not a new edition of Brandon. Since the Judicature Acts several cases have been decided in the Court of Appeal and in the High Court of Justice which have materially affected the jurisdiction and status of the Mayor's Court. It is most desirable, in the interest of the large and daily increasing number of suitors who find the local Court a convenient tribunal for settling their disputes,* that the chaos of decisions touching the jurisdiction should, if possible, be reduced to something like order in a systematic treatise. In attempting the execution of this task the writer has been greatly assisted by several learned friends. He is much indebted to the learned Registrar of the Court for the readiness with which any information asked for by the writer has been supplied. Some useful hints on points of practice have been furnished by the experience of Mr. R. A. M'Call (of the Northern Circuit) ; while Mr. J. F. Torr and Mr. Prosser (of the South-Eastern Circuit) have, by verifying the references to cases, &c., contributed to secure such claims to confidence as the book possesses.

* The number of actions entered in the Court in 1877 was 10,873, the total amount sued for being £250,684, and the total amount of fees taken by the Court being £5,860. These figures need no commentary.

The total absence of all Forms and Precedents from a book on the practice of a Civil Court may by some be regarded as a startling departure from immemorial custom, but is to be explained by a desire not to overload a light craft with commodities that may be had by any one for the asking (or for a small fee) at the Office of the Court or at a law stationer's.

INTRODUCTORY.

THE MAYOR'S COURT OF LONDON—popularly but erroneously (a) called the Lord Mayor's Court—is one of her Majesty's Courts of Record. Its full style and title, according to the statute which was passed for the purpose (inter alia) of making it more efficient by extending its powers and simplifying its practice and mode of procedure (b), is the Court of our Sovereign Lady the Queen, holden before the Lord Mayor and Aldermen in the Chamber of the Guildhall of the City of London (c).

After a long and somewhat acrimonious controversy, in the course of which—if Lord Westbury is to be believed (d)—"attempts were made silently to extend its jurisdiction beyond its proper and just limits," it was finally settled by the decision of the House of

(a) Apart from the objection that it is historically misleading (there having been a Mayor's Court centuries before there was a Lord Mayor), it is confusing to the popular mind to call by the name of "the Lord Mayor's Court" a Court with which in practice the Lord Mayor has nothing to do, the only Court which in reality deserves the name being the justice-room at the Mansion House.

(b) 20 & 21 Vict. c. 157. Preamble.

(c) Ibid., s. 54.

Mayor, &c., of London v. Cox (e), that the Mayor's Court is now—what it was no doubt originally—a municipal Court with a purely local jurisdiction, enlarged, it is true, to some extent by legislation, but with no general jurisdiction either created or impliedly recognised by the statute of 1857 (f).

The Judges. In theory, it is the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of the City before whom the Court is holden in the “outer chamber of the Guildhall,” but by immemorial custom they are represented—so far as this Court is concerned—by the Recorder of the City, whose place, in case of unavoidable absence, is supplied by the Common Serjeant or his deputy, who must be a barrister of not less than seven years' standing, and who is appointed either by the Recorder or Common Serjeant, or by the Common Council (g). The necessity for a permanent official to sit as judge in the absence of the Recorder and the Common Serjeant was recognised in 1873 by the appointment of Mr. Brandon to the office of Assistant Judge.

The Registrar. The Registrar of the Court has all the powers of the judge as regards the holding of Courts and the transaction of all business of the Court, except the trial of issues in law or in fact (h). As every day is, by the custom of the City, a Court day, the Registrar or the Deputy Registrar, whose powers are co-extensive with those of the Registrar, sits daily at the office of the Court in Church Passage, Guildhall, for the transaction of such business as in the High Court of Justice is transacted in Chambers by the Judges, the Masters, and the Chief Clerks.

The Serjeant-at-Mace is to the Mayor's Court what the Sheriff is to the High Court of Justice or the High Bailiff to a County Court. It is his duty to serve the proceedings in foreign attachments and generally to execute the process of the Court. The Serjeant-at-Mace.

Since the year 1852, when the lucrative monopoly Counsel and solicitors. lies (i) enjoyed by the privileged pleaders and attorneys of the Mayor's Court were abolished by the Court of Aldermen, this Court has been open to all duly qualified members of either branch of the profession. Solicitors have equal right of audience with the Bar in all collateral matters, but have no right to be heard on the trial of issues in law or fact in open Court; where the parties must appear in person or by counsel. No solicitor who has not been duly admitted to practise in the Mayor's Court upon compliance with the prescribed formalities (k) is competent to enter an action or an appearance, or, indeed, to take any proceeding whatever on behalf of a client in his own name; and any proceeding taken by or in the name of a solicitor not on the Court Roll may be set aside or stayed by order. Every solicitor entered on the Roll is, it needs scarcely be added, subject to the control which

(i) One of the privileged attorneys in 1845 paid £9000 as the price of his office. See the argument of R. Gurney in Reg. v. Mayor, &c., of London, 16 L. J. 1. B. 185. Those were the days when no "foreign counsel" could be heard in the Mayor's Court in any cause until all four City Counsel (or Common Pleaders) had been retained.

(k) Signing the Court Roll and payment of five shillings.

is exercised by every Court of Record over its own officers.

The jury. In the absence of any agreement between the parties to an action to try before a special jury or before the Court without a jury (l), every action when ripe for trial is sent before a common jury of twelve, who are drawn from the sheriff's books kept by the Secondary of the City. A special jury, whose services either party may secure on application to the Court, is summoned by the Serjeant-at-Mace, who obtains the panel from the Secondary; and the successful party who desires to recover from his opponent the costs of a special jury must, at the close of the trial, apply for the certificate of the presiding judge in conformity with the practice in the High Court. The fine for non-attendance without reasonable excuse of a juror who has been duly summoned is—up to the maximum of five pounds—in the discretion of the Court, and—in case of nonpayment in obedience to the directions of the Court—may be levied in the manner provided by the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 121 (m). The remuneration of a special jurymen is at the rate of a guinea a day, while that of a common jurymen is at the rate of twopence per case.

PART I.

THE ORDINARY JURISDICTION OF THE MAYOR'S COURT.

It has been already stated (a) that, since the judgment of the House of Lords in the Mayor, &c., of London v. Cox (b), no claim to a general jurisdiction, such as is exercised by the Superior Courts of Law and Equity, or (to use the term which now embraces them all) the High Court of Justice, can be set up on behalf of the Mayor's Court. Whether that decision was historically right or wrong, satisfactory or unsatisfactory; whether it was or was not virtually the judgment of Willes, J. (c), adopted by Lord Chancellor Cranworth and by Ex-Lord Chancellor Westbury; whether the able and distinguished counsel (d) who held briefs for the Corporation did or did not exhaust the learning of the subject in support of their client's pretensions;—all these are

(c) It is curious that the opinion of Willes, J., should have been spoken of by more than one learned

questions which it is idle, not to say impertinent, to discuss at the present day. The issue in which the status of the Mayor's Court was involved was then formally raised for the first time, and, after a most elaborate discussion, was decided against the Corporation, at whose instance it had been raised.

The Mayor's Court subject to control of High Court of Justice.

How far its local jurisdiction is extended by statute.

Vict. c.
An Act to extend powers of Mayor's
Court.

Sections of Act referred to by Willes, J., as carrying out object.

The consideration of this important question, then, starts from the incontrovertible proposition that this Court is a local court of limited jurisdiction (e), and subject, therefore, like every other Inferior Court, to the controlling jurisdiction of the High Court of Justice. The next question to be dealt with is, how far that local jurisdiction has been from time to time, either expressly or in effect, enlarged by legislation.

It was one of the objects of the Mayor's Court of London Procedure Act, 1857, to make this Court more efficient by extending its powers (f). It would, therefore, be reasonable to look for, among the provisions contained in the statute, at least one by which that object was—or was intended to be—carried into effect. The sections of the Act which are pointed at by Willes, J., in advising the House of Lords (g), as having this effect, are sections 13, 32, 38, and 48. To those sections, accordingly, attention will be directed in the course of this inquiry (h).

There are, however, two sections in particular which

(e) As such it has, at common law, no jurisdiction to try any cause of action which in any material part arose outside its local boundaries. See 1 Ch. Pl., 7th ed., 287, cited by Bovill, C. J., in his judgment in Cooke v. Gill, L. R.

for several reasons deserve to be considered first, that is to say, the 12th and the 15th. To be rightly understood, they must be construed together; and it is because they have been regarded independently one of the other that they have been, as will presently appear, a fruitful source of litigation, of ill temper, and of worse law. Before discussing what Parliament intended to effect by means of the provisions contained in these two sections, it may be worth while to examine briefly the language in which Parliament has thought fit to express that intention.

The 12th section is as follows:—

“Where the debt or damage claimed in any action shall not exceed the sum of £50, no plea to the jurisdiction shall be allowed, provided the defendant or one of the defendants shall dwell or carry on business within the City of London or the liberties thereof at the time of the action brought, or provided the defendant or one of the defendants shall have dwelt or carried on business at some time within six months next before the time of the action brought, or if the cause of action, either wholly or in part, arose therein.”

By section 15 it is enacted that—

“No defendant shall be permitted to object to the jurisdiction of the Court in or by any proceeding whatsoever, except by plea.”

Looking at these two sections side by side, with our minds unprejudiced by the numerous decided cases, but not forgetting that the framers of the local Act intended, while leaving the Mayor's Court (what they found it) a Court of limited jurisdiction, to enlarge its powers as such, what are we to pronounce as to their Section 15. conjoint effect? After the passing of the Act, no defendant is any longer to be permitted to object to—that is, to challenge—the jurisdiction of the Court in or by any proceeding whatsoever, except by plea. In order to measure the disabling force of this section, it is necessary to look back to the procedure of the Mayor's Court at the time the Act was passed, and find what were the "proceedings" (other than a plea) in or by which a defendant in the Mayor's Court was at that time "permitted to object to the jurisdiction of the Court." Before the Act, a defendant might give the question of jurisdiction the go-by in his defence, and,

 having allowed the case to go to trial on its merits, might take the plaintiff by surprise by asking for a non-suit on the ground of want of jurisdiction. That was one "proceeding" by which he was to be no longer permitted to raise the question of jurisdiction. Another proceeding no longer permissible for this purpose was moving in arrest of judgment. The same remark applies to demurrers and proceedings in error, &c. (i).
 Those "proceedings" are not done away with altogether by the 15th section, but the practice and mode of procedure of the Court are simplified, in accordance with the intention of those who framed the Act (j), by disabling the defendant in any action from taking advantage of any one of them as a means of raising the question of jurisdiction (k).

Such being the effect of the 15th section on every person sued in the Mayor's Court, what is the operation of the 12th section? That section enacts that in every claim not exceeding £50—so that what follows has no application to claims above that amount—provided that one of two states of fact is found to exist, the one relating to the person sued, the other to the ground of the complaint against him—no plea to the jurisdiction shall in future be allowed. So that, while a person sued on a claim exceeding £50 is not to be permitted to challenge the jurisdiction “in or by any proceeding whatsoever except by plea” (it does not say otherwise than by plea), every person sued on a claim not exceeding £50 is further forbidden to resort to that mode of objection. The one section takes away from all defendants in the Mayor's Court the right of objecting by any proceeding whatsoever save one; the other section takes away from such defendants as are sued under the conditions therein set forth the right of objecting by any proceeding whatsoever. So that, in cases within the terms of section 12, the Mayor's Court is absolutely precluded from all inquiry into the question of its own jurisdiction, because the defendant has no means whatever of raising the question in that Court. Did the Legislature really intend that a jurisdiction, which, under given conditions, was not to be directly challenged by a defendant, might nevertheless be impeached under the same conditions by anyone not a party to the action, and that a local court, which by the statute itself was prevented from learning its own want of jurisdiction, might nevertheless be prohibited by a Superior Court? Did not Parliament rather intend, in cases within the terms of section 12, to take away from the Superior Courts the exercise of their inherent right of prohibition, and, by so doing, in effect to confer on the Mayor's Court an absolute jurisdiction to try claims coming within the terms of that section? The Court of Appeal has expressly decided that such must have been the intention of Parliament.

Judgment of C. P. Division.

Under Judicature Acts

The case of Hawes v. Paveley (1) marks an epoch in the modern history of the Mayor's Court, and for that reason deserves a careful examination in these pages. The facts were these:—The defendant had accepted a bill for £45 outside the City, but made it payable in the City, where he carried on business. The bill having been presented and dishonoured in the City, thereupon the acceptor was sued for the amount in the Mayor's Court. Prima facie it would seem that, if there ever was a case within the terms of section 12, this was the case. The debt claimed in the action did not exceed £50: the defendant carried on business within the City at the time of the action brought; and the cause of action, moreover, if not wholly, at all events in part, arose therein. So, then, every condition necessary to preclude the defendant from objecting to the jurisdiction was present; in other words, all the circumstances showed that the jurisdiction of the Mayor's Court was unimpeachable; and the Common Pleas Division made the rule absolute for a prohibition with costs.

Thanks to the Judicature Acts, which gave the plaintiff a right to a re-hearing before the Court of Appeal, this question could now be argued before a plaintiff tribunal unembarrassed by previous decisions and free ^{might} appeal. to decide the issues involved as if they were then raised for the first time. The Master of the Rolls, upon the ^{Judgment} principle that a judge is bound to impute a reasonable ^{of Jessel,} ^{M. R.} intention to the Legislature in passing an Act of Parliament, and reading the two sections together, unhesitatingly came to the conclusion that, in taking away from a defendant sued under the conditions set forth in the 12th section the right to inform the Inferior Court that it was proceeding without any—or beyond its proper—jurisdiction, Parliament must have intended to take away at the same time his right to go to a Superior Court and ask for a prohibition. But if the defendant—the person immediately affected and aggrieved by the excess of jurisdiction—was not to be allowed to ask for a prohibition in his own name, could it be seriously contended for one moment that Parliament intentionally left him at liberty to compass the very same object by assuming the disguise of a stranger? That would, indeed, be a reductio ad absurdum of the enactment. Lord Justice Mellish pointed out that the decision of ^{Judgment} the Common Pleas Division was contrary to principle, ^{of Mellish,} ^{L. J.} inasmuch as it assumed that an Inferior Court might be subject to a writ of prohibition on the ground of excess of jurisdiction in a case where by the Act of Parliament it was impossible for the Inferior Court to be made cognizant of the facts upon which alone the prohibition was founded. Cockburn, C. J., and Pollock, B., concurring, the judgment of the Common Pleas Division was reversed, and the rule for a prohibition was discharged.

Observations on Hawes v.
Paveley.

It should not be overlooked that, while the case of Hawes v. Paveley decided that the joint effect of sections 12 and 15 of the Mayor's Court Act is to take away from a defendant sued in the Mayor's Court under certain specified conditions the right of moving for a prohibition either in his own name or in the name of anyone else, it also decided—or rather assumed as settled law—that, in cases where those conditions are not present, there is nothing in section 15 to prevent the defendant from doing what the Crown and every subject of the Crown including the plaintiff may do (m), by informing the Superior Court that an Inferior Court is exceeding its jurisdiction.

Effect of decision as to section

The effect of this last-mentioned expression of opinion, coming from the Court of Appeal, was to upset the settled practice—which had been rigidly enforced in the Court of Common Pleas—of requiring the motion for a prohibition to the Mayor's Court to be made in the name of a stranger, the defendant's solicitor being recognised by that Court as sufficiently a "stranger" to satisfy the letter of section 15 (n). But it must not be supposed that the practice of the Common Pleas in this regard had been looked upon with general approval until Hawes v. Paveley was decided. More than a year before that case came into the Court of Appeal, the Master of the Rolls was applied to by the plaintiff in a libel action against Mr. Justice Brett to set aside a writ of prohibition to the Mayor's Court, obtained from the

Petty Bag Office by the defendant's solicitors in their own names, following the practice of the Court of Common Pleas. It was quite clear on the facts that the Mayor's Court had no jurisdiction to try the action, and the only question seriously discussed on the motion was whether the defendant, who had not pleaded to the jurisdiction, was entitled to move for a prohibition in the Superior Court. Sir George Jessel, upon the principle that the jurisdiction of the Superior Courts to confine an Inferior Court within the limits of its jurisdiction cannot be taken away by anything short of express words or necessary implication, and being of opinion that there was nothing in the language of section 15 to lead necessarily to the inference that the Legislature intended to deprive the Superior Courts of their inherent right, held that the writ had been properly issued to the defendant. In point of form, it had not been issued to the defendant but to the clerk to the defendant's solicitors; but, as might have been expected, the suggestion that, by applying for it in the names of his solicitors, the defendant might lawfully obtain that to which he would not have been entitled if he had applied for it in his own name, was at once contemptuously put aside by the learned judge. Unable himself to countenance what he qualified as "a mere subterfuge and evasion" of the enactment in the statute, he also declined to attribute to the Court of Common Pleas the notion that an Act of Parliament may be evaded by a mere subterfuge. At the same time he could not overlook the fact that the practice of the Common Pleas, which compelled a defendant in the Sole question was as to effect of section 15. Judgment of Jessel, M. R.

The practice in the

C. P. explained. Mayor's Court who desired a prohibition to move in the name of a stranger, was either a circuitous method of "getting round" an Act of Parliament or a purely technical and meaningless formality resorted to as a means of avoiding unnecessary controversy. He accordingly came to the conclusion that the Court of Common Pleas had allowed the said practice to spring up and continue with their approval by way of showing their entire disapproval of the decision (by which at the same time they felt themselves bound) of Crompton, J., in the case of Manning v. Farquharson (o).

The explanation.

Manning v. Farquharson.
(Nov. 1860.)

Inasmuch as that case is no longer of any authority, having been obliquely glanced at by the House of Lords in the Mayor, &c., of London v. Cox, openly dissented from by Jessel, M. R., in Jacobs v. Brett, and finally overruled by the Court of Appeal in Hawes v. Paveley (although, for a reason to be explained in a subsequent page, no allusion is made to it in the judgments), it may be worth while to exhume that case from the Law Journal Reports for the purpose of a brief examination before it is finally consigned to the limbo of exploded law contained in what Lord Westbury was pleased to characterize as the rubbish of reports.

The facts.

This was an action begun in the Mayor's Court on September 25, 1860, by a firm of West-End army tailors for £536, the price of goods sold and delivered to the defendant. On the same day an attachment issued to Cox & Co., the well-known army agents, who had moneys of the defendant in their hands.

(o) 30 L. J. (N. S.) (Q. B.) 22; 2 H & C. 409; 3 L. T. 578; 9 W. R. 107; cited at p. 8 of Jacobs v. Brett, L. R. 20 Equity 1; 44 L. J. Ch. 377; 32 L. T. 522; 23 W. R. 556.

They appeared to the attachment as garnishees, but the defendant did not enter an appearance to the action. Upon an affidavit, which alleged that no part of the cause of action arose within the limits of the Mayor's Court jurisdiction, the defendant obtained a rule nisi for a prohibition, which came on for argument before Crompton, J., in the Bail Court. That very learned judge, after hearing Lush show cause and J. O. Griffiths in support of the rule, gave judgment to the following effect:—

Section 15 of the Mayor's Court Act compels a defendant—if he object to the jurisdiction—either to plead to or to submit to the jurisdiction. If he elect to plead to the jurisdiction, he must support his plea by proof, and the question of jurisdiction will then be decided by the Mayor's Court. If he elect not to plead to the jurisdiction, but to plead other matters by way of defence, he will be as much bound by the verdict as if the Mayor's Court had originally possessed jurisdiction to try the case. So far as the defendant is concerned, therefore, the effect of the section is to give the Mayor's Court jurisdiction to go on with the case in any event. The question whether a stranger may interfere and apply to the Superior Court for a prohibition, although the defendant himself may not, is left open as not being necessary to the decision. The old rule of law that an Inferior Court cannot exercise jurisdiction over matters not arising within the local limits, must be held to have been altered by this new Act of Parliament.

The fallacy which runs through and vitiates the whole of the reasoning of this judgment is the assumption that the Mayor's Court has jurisdiction to give judgment in a case where the defendant did not appear, but moved for prohibition.

tion that a motion in the Superior Court for a writ of prohibition to the Mayor's Court was one of the "proceedings" in or by which no defendant, after the passing of the Mayor's Court Act, was to be "permitted to object to the jurisdiction" of that Court.

Once admit that the words "in or by any proceeding whatsoever" in the 15th section include proceedings outside the Mayor's Court, and the conclusion at which Crompton, J., arrives is the only logical deduction to be drawn from the language of the section. But do those words include proceedings outside the Mayor's Court, and thus, by necessary implication, take away from the Superior Courts, when the applicant is the defendant, their inherent right to control an inferior tribunal? A simple method of testing this would be to follow it out to its legitimate result. If that were the right construction of the section, every defendant in the Mayor's Court—that is to say, every person against whom another person has brought an action with or without justification—is to be compelled to appear and take one of two courses. He may either submit, at once and without objection, to the jurisdiction of the local court, or he may take an objection to that jurisdiction by way of plea. In either case he is at the mercy of the local court. In the former case, he is precluded from raising the objection at a later stage, while, in the latter, he has submitted the final decision of the question whether the local court has or has not jurisdiction to the local court itself, and must, therefore, if that question be decided against him, submit also to judgment in the action, because, by pleading to the jurisdiction in the Mayor's Court, a defendant admits that there is no defence on the merits. It cannot be doubted that, if Parliament had intended to confer an unlimited jurisdiction on the Mayor's Court, and to render it absolutely independent of the control which is exercised by the Superior Courts over all other Inferior Courts, such an intention would have been indicated by express words. But, if the construction put upon the section by Crompton, J., was right, the new Act of Parliament must be taken to have abrogated by implication an old and well-established rule of law as to Inferior Courts—an assumption which is altogether unwarrantable.

It is clear from the language used by Willes, J., in advising the House of Lords in the Mayor, &c., of London v. Cox (p) that, if that learned judge had felt at liberty to dissent from the decision in Manning v. Farquharson (which, by the way, had been expressly approved by the Court of Exchequer Chamber in their judgment then under review by the House of Lords) (q), he would not have hesitated to do so. But, inasmuch as the case of the Mayor, &c., of London v. Cox, turned on the right of the garnishee to a prohibition under section 15 of the Mayor's Court Act, it was unnecessary for the House either to approve or overrule the decision in Manning v. Farquharson, which did not touch the garnishee. And hence it was that that case escaped on that occasion the fate which sooner or later was certain to overtake it.

tion. In the report, however, Bovill, C.J., is made to say (addressing the applicant's counsel): "You cannot get over the express enactment in the Mayor's Court Act; the defendant cannot have a prohibition." Then we find Keating, J., adding for the comfort of the learned counsel, who may have been somewhat taken aback by the Chief Justice's abrupt way of putting the case: "There can be no difficulty in framing the motion so as to get over the objection." The rule was, of course, refused on that occasion, but, as the reporter goes on to tell us in a foot note, the application was renewed, and the rule, being moved for on behalf of a "stranger"—that is, the defendant's attorney—was granted as a matter of course upon the usual affidavit.

What
Clark* was supposed to have decided.

That decision, to judge by the few lines contained in the Law Reports, appears on the face of it to be, in so many words, a decision that a defendant in the Mayor's

Court, being precluded by the letter of the statute from moving for a prohibition in his own name, must "get over" the technical difficulty which the Legislature has thrown in his way by applying for it in the name of someone else who does not labour under the like disability—say his own solicitor, or that solicitor's clerk (s).

It needs hardly be said that, after Baker v. Clark, no more direct applications for writs of prohibition were made to the Court of Common Pleas by defendants in the Mayor's Court. The practice was supposed to be settled, and, in that Court, was of course adhered to. But in May, 1876, a few days after the Court of Appeal had reversed the decision of the Common Pleas in Hawes v. Paveley, the question was again raised before Lord Coleridge, C.J., and Brett and Archibald, JJ., in the case of Bridge v. Branch (t). We shall have occasion, in the course of this retrospect of the decisions affecting the jurisdiction and practice of the Mayor's Court, to refer again to that case upon another point. But, for the present purpose, it is enough to say that the objection having been taken—and very properly taken—by the plaintiff's counsel, that the rule for a prohibition had been wrongly granted on the motion of the defendant, who, if Baker v. Clark was correctly reported, was not entitled to ask for a prohibition, that objection was promptly overruled by the Court, Lord Coleridge remarking that he and all the judges, with whom he had had an opportunity of speaking on the Jacobs v. Brett followed. subject, entirely agreed with that very learned judge the Master of the Rolls in Jacobs v. Brett (u), where he had clearly demonstrated that section 15 of the Mayor's Court Act related only to the procedure in the Mayor's Court. Then we find Archibald, J., adding—as if the point had never been doubted, and as if Manning v. Farquharson had never been decided—that “it was perfectly open to the defendant as to any one else to call the attention of a Superior Court to any excess of jurisdiction claimed by the Inferior Court.”

Baker v. Clark required to be explained, if not overruled. At the same time, however, that the uniform practice of the Court of Common Pleas for a series of years was thus summarily discarded on the strength of a decision by a judge of a co-ordinate Court, there still stood in the books that case of Baker v. Clark, cited by the plaintiff's counsel. It was necessary therefore that Baker v. Clark should be either overruled or distinguished, and accordingly we find that, in the hands of Lord Coleridge and Brett, J., it underwent the process of being what the law reporter, in the head note to Bridge v. Branch, calls “explained.”

Lord Coleridge's explanation. According to Lord Coleridge the explanation was that, in consequence of a suggestion that section 15 precluded the defendant from objecting to the jurisdiction otherwise (x) than by plea, a difficulty was supposed to arise, to obviate which the applicant (in Baker v. Clark) was recommended to renew the motion explanation, added that it never was intended to decide as matter of law that the defendant himself could not move in prohibition, all that was intended being that, as some argument might be raised as to section 15, it was better not to raise the question, when all doubt might be obviated by moving in the name of a stranger, as suggested in the Mayor, &c., of London v. Cox.

This "explanation" would have been more satisfactory if it were the fact that "all doubt might have been obviated" by moving in the name of a stranger. But, unfortunately for that theory, it so happened that, when the Court where the defendant moved for a prohibition in the name of a stranger was not the Common Pleas, so far was all doubt from being obviated that it was only more doubtful than before. This was illustrated by a case decided by the Master of the Rolls in the previous year. Chambers v. Green (y) was an action in the Mayor's Court for the price of goods sold and delivered, in which judgment had been signed for default of appearance and execution issued. Both judgment and execution having, on the application of the defendant, been set aside on terms, a writ of prohibition was two days later issued out of the Petty Bag Office to restrain the Mayor's Court on the ground of want of jurisdiction. The plaintiff then moved before Jessel, M.R., to set aside the writ, which that learned judge, in the exercise of the discretion which he believed himself to possess, accordingly did with costs. It should be mentioned (to make what follows intelligible) that the writ had been taken out, regardless of the warning given in Jacobs v. Brett (z), in the name of the defendant's solicitor, who played his accustomed rôle of "stranger." Jessel, M.R., recognising the well-known rule that the Superior Court will not grant a writ of prohibition to an Inferior Court unless it is satisfied upon the law and the facts that the Inferior Court is exceeding its jurisdiction, held also, upon the authority of Cockburn, C.J., and Wightman and Crompton, JJ., in re Forster (a), that, even where there is no doubt as to the excess of jurisdiction, the Superior Court is not bound ex debito justitiæ to prohibit, if the informant is a stranger and not a party aggrieved, but may exercise a discretion to grant or refuse the writ.

In re Forster followed, Worthington v. Jeffries dissented from.

This decision was—or appeared to be—directly in the teeth of a considered judgment of the Court of Common Pleas delivered by Brett, J., in the previous April. In Worthington v. Jeffries (b), the Common Pleas had decided that, where the Superior Court is satisfied in law and in fact of the want of jurisdiction, it is judicially bound ex debito justitiæ to prohibit the encroachment on the Royal Prerogative, no matter how or by whom it is informed thereof. The Common Pleas judges held that there was no room for the exercise of a judicial discretion except where there was a doubt as to the law or the facts, while the Master of the Rolls, on the other hand, seems to have held that the question whether there was room for the exercise of a judicial discretion depended upon the answer to the question whether the informant was an interested party or a disinterested person who was not a party.

The judgment of the M.R., if correctly reported, ^{Basis of} appears to have been based on the hypothesis that both ^{M.R.'s de-} ^{cision.} plaintiff and defendant in the Inferior Court—the only parties interested—were agreed in wishing the Inferior Court to decide the cause, while a stranger to the litigation had volunteered the information that the Inferior Court was going beyond its jurisdiction. The learned judge, no doubt, intentionally ignored the fact that the said hypothesis, albeit consistent with the apparent circumstances, was not consistent with the actual circumstances of the case. No one knew better than Sir George Jessel that the hypothetical “stranger” was in fact the solicitor acting or purporting to act on behalf of the defendant, or, in other words, the defendant himself in disguise.

Here then was exhibited a somewhat anomalous ^{Result of} state of things. An application was made to the ^{this differ-} Master of the Rolls to prohibit the Mayor's Court in a ^{ence of} case where there was no doubt of the excess of jurisdic- ^{opinion.} tion, and that application was refused on the sole ground that it was made by a stranger and not by the defendant. Had the same application been made to the Court of Common Pleas by the defendant in his own name (as, according to Jessel, M.R., it ought to have been), it would have been refused on the sole ground that it ought to have been made in the name of a stranger.

In a later case before the Common Pleas Division ^{Ellis v.} (Ellis v. Fleming) (c), the dictum of the M.R. in Cham- ^{Fleming.} ^{(Jan.,} ^{1876.)}

Chambers v. Green was referred to by Brett, J., who gave it as his opinion that the dictum in question did not at all derogate from the authority of the Common Pleas' decision in Worthington v. Jeffries (d), and amounted to no more than this—that, upon the question of discretion, the Master of the Rolls did not adopt the view taken by the Court of Common Pleas.

It is no doubt unfortunate when reported judgments require judicial explanation, but, with all due deference to Lord Justice Brett, we cannot help suspecting that the true explanation of the somewhat puzzling decision in Chambers v. Green (e) is to be found in the determination of the Master of the Rolls to discountenance anything like an evasion of the Act of Parliament. That explains, probably, why he could not or would not see the defendant behind the stranger.

It is interesting to observe that in a subsequent case (Taylor v. Nicholls) (f), to which reference will be made hereafter for another purpose, the motion for a rule nisi was made on the joint affidavit of the defendant and a stranger; a happy combination of an interested party with a disinterested person, to which no exception could be taken either in Westminster Hall or at the Rolls. The judgment, however, of the Court of Appeal in Hawes v. Paveley (g) has finally removed all occasion for any such exercise of ingenuity in future cases, and, should it ever be necessary again to go to the High Court of Justice to restrain the Mayor's Court from exceeding its jurisdiction, the solicitor for the defendant need have no fear lest, if he instruct counsel to move on behalf of the defendant, there should be a repetition of what is reported to have happened in the Court of Common Pleas in the case of Baker v. Clark.

It may be mentioned, before leaving this branch of the subject, that in May, 1877, an application was made to the Exchequer Division by the defendant in the case of Oram v. Brearey (h), for a prohibition to the Salford Hundred Court of Record, on the ground of want of jurisdiction. That Court has jurisdiction in personal actions where the debt or damage claimed does not exceed £50, if the cause of action arises within the Hundred. It was not disputed that in this case the cause of action arose outside the local jurisdiction, but it was contended that, by the 7th section of the local Act, it was obligatory on the defendant to take the objection to jurisdiction by a special plea, and that, as he had not done so, he could not move for a prohibition. The language of the section, which is slightly different from that of the 15th section of the M. C. L. P. Act, 1857, runs as follows:—"No defendant shall be permitted to object to the jurisdiction of the Court otherwise than by special plea; and if the want of jurisdiction be not so pleaded, the Court shall have jurisdiction for all purposes."

Judgment
of Ex. Div.

It was on the reasoning of the judgments in Jacobs v. Brett and Hawes v. Paveley that Pollock and Huddleston, BB., held that full effect was given to the words of the local Act by construing them to mean that, after the passing of the Act, the only mode open to defendant (h) L. R. 2 Ex. D. 346; 46 L. J. (Ex.) 481; 36 L. T. (N. S.) 475; 25 W. R. 695.

of objecting in that Court to the jurisdiction was by a special plea. There were no express words depriving the Superior Courts of their inherent right to prohibit the local Court from transgressing the local limits, nor was the intention to take away that right a necessary inference from the language used. It must be held, therefore, that the right had not been taken away, and that the defendant was entitled to the writ, although he had not pleaded specially, and although, by consequence, the Salford Court was to "have jurisdiction for all purposes."

The 15th section, so far as regards its proper meaning and effect independently of the 12th, being now disposed of, we may revert to the question with which Hawes v. Paveley was mainly concerned—the meaning and effect of the 12th section when read by the light of the 15th. The first point to be noted is that the 12th section does not apply to any case where the amount sought to be recovered exceeds £50. Secondly, it does apply to every claim not exceeding that amount, whether it be debt or damages, provided one or the other of two alternative conditions is satisfied. The Mayor's Court has an absolute jurisdiction to try every claim not exceeding £50, provided one of the defendants (if there are more defendants than one) dwells or carries on business within the City of London or the liberties thereof at the time the action is commenced, or has done so at any time within six months of that date.

ly a mere

Primâ facie one would scarcely expect to find any question of law involved in the attempt to answer, of any given person, the simple questions: Does he dwell ^{question of fact.} or carry on business within the City of London or its liberties? Has he done so at any time within six months of a given day? These would seem to be mere questions of fact, requiring, before they can be satisfactorily answered, a knowledge of the topography of the City of London, and of the biography for six months past of the person or persons whom it is proposed to sue in the local Court. If the defendant dwells, or has at any time within the past six months dwelt, within those limits, it is unnecessary to inquire where he carries on or has carried on business. Conversely, if he carries on, or has at any time within the past six months carried on, business within those limits, it is immaterial where he dwells or has dwelt. Simple, however, as these questions at first sight appear to be, the answers to them cannot safely be relied on without ^{Not so, really.} a knowledge of the rules which have been laid down by the Courts in reference to such considerations.

It may be assumed that, in considering whether any ^{1st question:} given case falls within the terms of section 12, no ^{Where} serious difficulty is likely to arise as to the dwelling-^{does the defendant dwell or carry on business?} place or place of business of an individual or (to borrow a phrase from Huddleston, B.) "a natural man." A ^{The answer to that question, where defendant is an individual.} natural person "dwells" where he habitually sleeps and lives; or, in other words, where his home is. Similarly, he "carries on business" where his business is carried on or managed. Most persons have a "home" of some sort—some place where they may be said to live. But, in the present day, the number of those whose "home" is to be found within the boundaries of the "City of London or the liberties thereof" is very limited, and is likely to become more so. Practically, therefore, it is of more importance for the present purpose to know how the Courts of Law have construed the expression "carrying on business." The result of the authorities upon that point seems to be that no person can be held to "carry on business" who has not an independent business of his own. Attempts were made from time to time, in cases arising under the Small Debts Acts (i), to extend the meaning of the word "business," and to show by the authority of Johnson's Dictionary that it was synonymous with "employment." All such attempts, however, were futile, the Courts invariably refusing to hold that a person who was not in business for himself at all could properly be said to "carry on business" at any particular place. So far, the questions seem tolerably easy to answer. But when the person to be sued is "the artificial and legal person called a corporation," the answer is by no means so simple a matter. Suppose one has a claim against a joint-stock company with an office in the City, and, for reasons of his own, is desirous of trying his claim in the Mayor's Court, how is he to make sure that he is right in assuming, because the defendants have a place of business in the City, that it is there they carry on their business?

Cesena Sulphur Co. v. Nicholson; Calcutta

This question was discussed by the Exchequer Division in two Revenue cases argued together before Kelly, C.B., and Huddleston, B., in February, 1876 (k). The definition there given by the Chief Baron of the “residence” of a joint-stock company may serve as a guide to persons who wish to sue a company in the Mayor’s Court. “A joint-stock company resides where its place of incorporation is—where the meetings of the whole company or of those who represent it are held, and where its governing body meets in bodily presence for the purposes of the company.” It would be difficult to formulate more neatly the test by which to determine where a joint-stock company dwells or carries on business. Anyone who is interested in pursuing the investigation of this subject will find the authorities summarized or referred to in the judgment of Huddleston, B.

Then, again, as to railway companies, of which there are several having a terminus within the boundaries of the City, the question will often arise—where does the company carry on business? Happily for future litigants in the Mayor’s Court and their legal advisers, the answer to that question has been given decisively in two recent cases in which the South Eastern Railway Company and the London, Chatham and Dover Railway Company were respectively defendants. In neither case did the damage claimed exceed £50; in both cases it was admitted that no part of the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction of the Mayor’s Court. In each case the fact relied on by the plaintiff as giving the Mayor’s Court an absolute jurisdiction under the 12th section was the fact that the company “carried on business within the City or the liberties thereof.” It was undisputed that, in one sense, each company did carry on business within the City, the South Eastern having a terminal station in Cannon Street, and the Chatham Company a terminal station at Holborn Viaduct. Each company, moreover, in addition to its normal business as carriers for reward, carried on the business of hotel-keepers within the local boundaries. In the case of the Chatham Company, too, it was alleged and not denied that the principal depôt for the goods traffic was at Blackfriars, which, though not within the City, was said to be within the liberties of the City, and, therefore, was equally within the jurisdiction of the Mayor's Court. It was in vain that plaintiff's counsel argued that, the main object of the local Act being to extend the jurisdiction of the local Court, the words "carrying on business" should be construed liberally and with a leaning rather towards than against an extension of the inferior jurisdiction. The learned Judges of the Common Pleas Division, however (Grove and Lindley, JJ.), were not convinced by the ingenious argument, and ordered the Writ of Prohibition to go without calling on the defendant's counsel. The fact was that the case of Brown v. The London & North Western Railway Company (l) was an authority directly in point, and, unfortunately for the plaintiffs in the cases of Le Tailleur v. South Eastern Railway Company (m) and Rogers v. London, Chatham and Dover Railway Company (n), directly against them. The only hope of distinguishing those cases from Brown's case lay in the circumstance that the one was decided upon the language of section 60 of the Small Debts Act (9 & 10 Vict. c. 95)—an Act passed to confer a limited jurisdiction—while the others turned upon the language of section 12 of the Mayor's Court Procedure Act, an Act passed to extend a limited jurisdiction. It needs hardly to be added that Brown's case was held to be undistinguishable, and, being so, was followed. The consideration, therefore, of this branch of the subject now under discussion may be suitably closed with an extract from the judgment of Blackburn, J., in what is still the leading case on this point: "Business can only be said to be 'carried on' where it is managed . . . the place of business in general must be the place where the general superintendence and management take place. The London & North Western Railway Company are carrying on a very extensive business at different great stations—Chester among the rest; BUT IT IS ONE ENTIRE BUSINESS, and the whole is controlled by the directors in London, where there is the general superintendence. I agree with Hill, J. (in Shiels v. The Great Northern Railway Company) (o), that a railway company carries on its business at the principal station only."

Attempt failed.

Blackburn, J., in Brown v. L. & N. W. Ry. Co., at p. 321.

Shiels v. G. N. Ry. Co., cited with approval.

That last sentence sums up the law as it now stands, and, therefore, the point which any one who is contemplating an action in the Mayor's Court against a railway company must, if he would avoid the pains and penalties of a writ of prohibition, take care to ascertain is whether the principal station—and there can only be one principal station to every railway company—is within the City of London or the liberties thereof. If it be so, then he may safely sue the Company in the Mayor's Court for any sum not exceeding £50, even although the whole cause of action arose out of the jurisdiction. If it be not, then he cannot sue the Company in that Court unless he can show that some part of the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction.

Second alternative condition in section 12.

Part of the cause of action must have arisen within the local limits.

This brings us to the consideration of the second alternative condition which, if present, will give the Mayor's Court an absolute jurisdiction in cases within the 12th section. If the cause of action, either wholly or in part, arose therein—i. e., within the local limits—no plea to the jurisdiction shall be allowed; in other words, the competence of the Mayor's Court to try the action shall not be in any way challenged by the defendant or by any one else.

As it is obviously idle to inquire whether "the cause of action" in any given case "arose" at any given place, unless it is known, (1) what is to be understood by a "cause of action," and (2) what is meant by a cause of action "arising" at a particular place, it will be necessary to review the authorities upon these points.

What is meant by a cause of action?

Examples of definition.

Kelly, C.B.

Cleasby, B.

We may begin by saying that the simple words "cause of action," which to the lay intelligence convey either no meaning whatever or some hazy notion associated with the service of a writ, are capable, in the hands of experts, of being twisted and stretched until they appear to bear any meaning that one likes to put upon them. Here are a few stray specimens, by way of illustration. "Independently of authority I should hold that cause of action means whole cause of action" (per Kelly, C.B.) (p). "The word 'whole' as applied to a cause of action has no meaning, for the whole cause of action cannot be said to arise anywhere" (per Cleasby, B.) (q). "I understand by cause of action that which creates the necessity for bringing the action or the case of complaint," (per Pigott, B.) (r). The cause of Pigott, B. action arose in England, because that is the place where the parties were when the breach [of promise to marry] took place," (per Martin, B.) (s). "Cause of action has been held, from the earliest time, to mean every fact which is material to be proved to entitle the plaintiff to succeed, and which the defendant would have a right to traverse," (per Brett, J.) (t). "The cause of action means the entire cause of action" (per Martin, B.). Martin, B. "All the facts which together constitute the plaintiff's right to maintain the action" (per Blackburn, J.), (u). It should be remembered that these various and contradictory attempts to define a cause of action were called forth by the necessity for putting a rational construction on the ambiguous language of a familiar section (the 18th) of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852. Unfortunately, the view taken by the Court of Queen's Bench of the meaning of the words "a cause of action which arose within the jurisdiction" was entirely opposed to the view taken by the Court of Common Pleas. In 1868—not to mention earlier cases—the Queen's Bench in Allhusen v. Malgarejo (u), held that those words meant not merely the act on the part of the defendant which gives rise to the action, but all the facts which of action which arose," &c. together constitute the plaintiff's right to maintain the action. Acting upon this view of the meaning of the section, the Court set aside the writ, the service, and all subsequent proceedings, on the ground that the cause of action did not arise within the jurisdiction. It is a noteworthy commentary on the working of the judicature system which was abolished when the Superior Courts of Law and Equity were consolidated under the title of the High Court of Justice that, after the action in the Queen's Bench had been discontinued, the plaintiff issued a fresh writ in the Court of Common Pleas, and Willes, J., sitting at Chambers, having given him leave to proceed in accordance with the usual practice in that Court, he did proceed with his action, and recovered large damages from the defendant (x).

Ex. 48, at p. 50; 40 L. J. (N. S.)

Jackson v. Spittal. (July, 1870.) In July, 1870, the Court of Common Pleas (Bovill, C.J., Keating, M. Smith, and Brett, J.J.), expressly dissented from the construction put upon the section by the Court of Queen's Bench, and defined the words "cause of action," &c., to mean "the act on the part of the defendant which gives the plaintiff his cause of complaint." (y). The judgment in that case (Jackson v. Spittal) (y), was delivered by Brett, J., and contains an exhaustive and elaborate review of the state of the law at the time the statute (C. L. P. Act, 1852) was passed in regard to the jurisdiction of the English Courts over British subjects resident abroad and over foreigners.

Some words defined by Common Pleas. Considered judgment delivered by Brett, J. Facts of that case. There the plaintiff had sued the defendant, a British subject residing in the Isle of Man, on an alleged breach of a contract not to indorse a bill of exchange delivered to him as a security. The contract was made in the Isle of Man, which was not—but the breach occurred in Manchester, which was—within the jurisdiction of the English Courts. The defendant, having been served with a writ in the Isle of Man, obtained an order to stay proceedings on the ground that the whole cause of action did not arise within the jurisdiction. The matter being referred from chambers to the Court, the order to stay was set aside; whereas, if the plaintiff had been suing in the Court of Queen's Bench, it was the writ that would have been set aside.

In the course of the same year the Court of Exchequer had the same question before it in a breach of ^{Court of Exchequer.}

cutta, and afterwards, when in England, renounced the ^{Facts of that case.}
contract in a letter to the plaintiff, who also was in England at the time. This was the breach complained of; in other words, it was "the act on the part of the defendant which gave rise to the action." Having returned to the Cape, the defendant was there served with the writ, which he now moved to set aside on the ground that the cause of action did not arise within the jurisdiction. Martin, B., was of opinion that the cause ^{Martin, B.}
of action did arise within the jurisdiction, because both plaintiff and defendant were in England when the breach took place. At the same time he expressly ad-case of Sichel v. Borch (a), and approved the Queen's Bench decision in Allhusen v. Margarejo (b). Pigott, B., adopted the view of the Common Pleas in Jackson v. Spittal (c), as being "in accordance with the true meaning of the words used by the Legislature in framing the section." Cleasby, B., looking at the words "cause of action" as if they were used for the first time in that section, and ignoring the fact that they had acquired a secondary meaning as words of art, held that the true test of the place where a cause of action arose is to determine the time when it arose. When it arises, according to the learned Baron, is when that is not done which ought to have been done, or when that is done which ought not to have been done. Fix on the moment of time when that default or that act took place, and you will have fixed on the place where the cause of action arose. Kelly, C.B., on the other hand, was of opinion that the Queen's Bench were right and the Common Pleas wrong, and that the "balance of justice and expediency inclined strongly against" the construction put upon the section by the Common Pleas. There being, however, a majority in favour of the plaintiff in this particular case, the writ was not set aside, and the action proceeded.

In 1872, in the case of Cherry v. Thompson (d), the same question was again raised in the Queen's Bench before the Lord Chief Justice, and Blackburn, Lush, and Quain, JJ., who reconsidered the decision in Result.

It must not, however, be assumed that, because the controversy between the Queen's Bench and Common Pleas as to the meaning of certain words in the 18th section of the C. L. P. Act, 1852, was disposed of, that settlement necessarily carried with it the question of the meaning to be put upon the same or similar words in a section of another statute and in a different context. What Vaughan v. Weldon (h) settled was that, in using the words "a cause of action which arose within the jurisdiction, or in respect of the breach of a contract made within the jurisdiction," it should in future be taken that Parliament intended that the plaintiff (in the Superior Court) should have liberty to proceed wherever the judge is satisfied by affidavit that the act on the part of the defendant which gives the plaintiff his immediate cause of complaint was committed within the jurisdiction of the English Courts. Right or wrong, that is to be for the future the construction of that particular enactment, which, so construed, undoubtedly extends the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of Judicature in this country as well over foreigners as over British subjects resident abroad.

Inferior
Court.

And the series of decisions upon the construction of the words "cause of action" as used in the Small Debts Act (9 & 10 Vict. c. 95), shows that her Majesty's Judges have never lost sight of the old rule that "nothing shall be intended to be within the jurisdiction of an Inferior Court but that which is so expressly alleged" (i). Therefore, in every case where the question was as to the construction of the words in the 60th section of the Small Debts Act—"the district in which the cause of action arose," it was held by the Superior Courts that by "the cause of action" was there meant the entire cause of action, so that if any material part of the cause of action arose outside the district, that was not the district in which "the cause of action" arose. The language of section 128 of the same statute was different. The object of that section was to give the Superior Courts, in certain cases, concurrent jurisdiction with the Inferior Courts. All actions, &c., which might (before that Act) have been brought in any of her Majesty's Superior Courts of Record . . . where the cause of action did not arise wholly or in some material point within the jurisdiction of the Court within which the defendant dwelt or carried on his business at the time of the action brought, might be brought and determined in any such Superior Court at the election of the party suing, as if the Act had not passed.

There, if the cause of action did not, either wholly or in some material point (not a very happy mode of expression), arise within the prescribed limits, the party complaining might resort to the Inferior or to the Superior Courts at his election. Conversely, if, in any material point, the cause of action did arise within those limits, the party complaining had no option, but was compelled to seek his remedy in the Inferior Court. Under that section, therefore, in any case where admittedly the cause of action did not wholly arise within the local jurisdiction, the question would occur whether it could be said to have arisen there in any "point," and, if so, whether that point was a material point. The answer to the last question would of course depend on the nature of the particular case (k).

The wording of the 128th section of the Small Debts Act is identical with that of the section of the Mayor's Court Procedure Act which we are now discussing, save that for the words "in some material point" the words "in part" are substituted. But in the County Courts Acts Amendment Act of 1867, the language is verbatim the same. With the leave of the Court a plaint may be entered in the County Court in whose district the cause of action or suit wholly or in part arose. That being so, it would not be unreasonable to expect that the principle upon which the Judges of the Superior Courts have decided cases arising under the first section of the

Vict. c.
142.

(k) In Huth v. Long (19 L. J. Q. B. 325) it was held by Coleridge, J., that proof of notice of dishonour having been given to the drawer of a bill within the jurisdiction was enough to show that the cause of action in a material point arose therein. Compare Wood v. Perry (Feb., 1849), 18 L. J. Ex. 161, and the cases there cited.

County Courts Acts Amendment Act, 1867, would be also the principle upon which they would decide cases arising under the 12th section of the Mayor's Court Procedure Act. In the case of Green v. Beach (1), which came before the Court of Exchequer in June, 1873, the plaintiff carried on business in the Blackburn County Court district, and the defendant in that of the Liverpool County Court. The plaintiff at Blackburn made a verbal offer to the defendant to buy certain cotton, which offer the defendant accepted at Liverpool, where he signed and posted a sold note which the plaintiff received at Blackburn. The cotton was to be, and was, delivered at Liverpool, but, as the plaintiff alleged, less than invoice weight; and by leave of the Registrar a plaint for damages for short delivery was entered in the Blackburn County Court. As Liverpool, where the contract was completed, is not in the Blackburn County Court district, the point was raised, on the defendant's motion for a prohibition, whether the cause of action had "in part arisen" in the district of the Blackburn County Court. It was held by Kelly, C.B., and Martin Judgment. and Pollock, BB., that the verbal offer at Blackburn, though not of itself a contract, was nevertheless a part—that is to say, a material part—of the cause of action, and that, consequently, the Blackburn County Court was not exceeding its jurisdiction. Rule for a prohibition refused accordingly.

For "Blackburn County Court" read "the Mayor's Court, London," and suppose that the question of law instead of arising under the County Courts Act, 1867, had arisen under the 12th section of the Mayor's Court Procedure Act. Surely the ratio decidendi would have been the same, and the decision could not possibly have been affected by any desire on the part of learned judges to curb the ambition of an aspiring inferior tribunal. There is no doubt that, if the hypothetical case had been argued in the Exchequer, the accident that the Inferior Court was situated in the City of London and not in Lancashire would in no degree have affected the judgment. Whether so much could have been safely predicated of the Court of Common Pleas in the year 1873 is a question which may be better answered after a study of some of the reported judgments of that Court in the two or three years immediately preceding the memorable decision of the Court of Appeal in Hawes v. Paveley.

Quartly v. Timmins.

Facts of that case.

Claim not exceeding £50.

Verdict for Plaintiff.

Motion by stranger for a Prohibition.

Cause shown.

The first of the series was the case of Quartly v. Timmins (m), decided in January, 1874, by Lord Coleridge, C.J., and Keating and Brett, JJ. It was an action under the Bills of Exchange Act, 1867, to recover £30 balance of principal and interest due on a bill drawn upon and accepted by the defendant, payable one month after date. The defendant resisted the claim in the Mayor's Court, and the case went to trial, resulting in a verdict for the plaintiff, whereupon "a stranger" (defendant's attorney, as usual) moved in the Common Pleas for a rule for a prohibition on an affidavit stating that the cause of action "did not arise wholly, or in a material part, within the City," &c., and that defendant did not dwell, &c., within, &c. On cause being shown, it seems that Manning v. Farquharson was cited, for the purpose apparently of supporting the contention that the right of prohibition was altogether taken away by section 15 of the Mayor's Court, whereupon Keating, J., observed that "that case occurred long before the Mayor, &c., of London v. Cox," an observation which justifies the inference that, in the opinion of that learned judge, the judgment of Crompton, J., in so far as it was supposed to be an authority against the right to prohibit on the motion of a stranger, had been overruled by the House of Lords.

It is well that attention should be drawn to the head-note to Quartly v. Timmins in the Law Reports, because, as it stands, it seems to assume that the mere fact of the claim in the Mayor's Court being below (it should have been "not exceeding") £50 took away the defendant's right to plead to the jurisdiction, which is, of course, an entirely erroneous reading of the 12th section. The truth is that, unless the facts are wrongly reported, the case was not within the 12th section at all. Assuming that the words in the report "the defendant not being amenable to the jurisdiction" meant that the defendant did not dwell or carry on business within the City or the liberties thereof, and assuming also that no attempt was made to show that the cause of action had even in part arisen therein, it is obvious that the defendant might have objected to the jurisdiction by way of plea, and, if so, was equally entitled after verdict to set aside the proceedings on the ground of want of jurisdiction.

(n) L.R. 9 C.P. 414; 43 L.J. (N.S.) C.P. 244; 30 L.T. 500; 22 W.R. Dig. 138.

- (May, 1874.) before Lord Coleridge, C.J., Brett and Denman, JJ.
- Facts of that case. This was an action on a cheque for £10 payable to bearer, drawn by one Lazarus on the London and South Western Bank in the City, and indorsed to the plaintiff by the defendant at Scarboro'. Neither plaintiff nor defendant dwelt or carried on business in the City.
- Affidavit on motion for a Prohibition. The defendant's affidavit stated that no part of the cause of action arose within the Mayor's Court jurisdiction, an allegation which, unless displaced, entitled him to a prohibition on the facts. Cause being shown against the rule, which had been granted as of course on the affidavit mentioned, it was contended that, as the cheque was made payable in the City, the cause of action had in part arisen there when payment was refused. It was urged that the 12th section of the Mayor's Court Act "was clearly intended to give jurisdiction to the Mayor's Court in such a case as this," where "the act on the part of the defendant which gave the plaintiff his cause of complaint" took place within the local jurisdiction. This contention drew from Brett, J., the remark that, if that had been the intention of the Legislature, it was very easy to say so.
- Contention on part of Plaintiff. Cause shown.
- Brett, J. Brett, J., thought it was impossible, after the repeated rebuffs sustained by practitioners in the City, that the plaintiff's attorney could fairly have imagined that the Mayor's Court of London had jurisdiction to try a cause of action which arose at Scarboro'. The truth probably is that the plaintiff's attorney did not imagine anything of the kind. He found that, by the 12th section of the Mayor's Court Procedure Act, no plea to the jurisdiction was to be allowed where the cause of action in part arose within the City, and he "imagined" that, inasmuch as in this case the breach or immediate cause of complaint occurred in the City, the cause of action had, in part, arisen within the jurisdiction. It was true there was the case of Sichel v. Borch (o) against him in the Exchequer, but on the other hand there was the case of Fife v. Round (p) (also in the Exchequer) in his favour. And what made the reproof still harder to bear was the fact that, four years before, it had been solemnly laid down by the full Court of Common Pleas that by "cause of action" is to be understood the act on the part of the defendant which gives the plaintiff his cause of complaint. If that was the meaning of a cause of action arising at a given place, was the attorney to be publicly censured because he imagined that a fortiori it would be held to be the meaning of a cause of action in part arising at a given place? The same learned judge goes on to observe that, after the elaborate discussion in the House of Lords in the Mayor, &c., of London v. Cox—(which, as has been pointed out before (q), dealt entirely with the right of a garnishee to move in prohibition, and decided nothing as to the effect of the 12th section on the ordinary jurisdiction of the Mayor's Court)—it behoved that Court to stamp out these improper attempts to create a jurisdiction which was never contemplated by the Legislature.

The next case in the same series was Gold v. Gold v. Turner (r), which was argued before Lord Coleridge, (Nov. 1874.)

C.J., Brett and Grove, JJ., in the following November, on the day after it had been announced by Lord Coleridge that for the future the rule laid down by that Court as to a cause of action arising within the jurisdiction of the Superior Courts would be followed in all the Courts at Westminster Hall. This was a claim not exceeding £50 for the price of goods sold and delivered, and the defendant dwelt, &c., out of the jurisdiction. The goods were ordered at Poplar to be delivered to a carrier named by the buyer, and to be paid for by him. They were received by the carrier, on delivery orders handed to him by the seller in the City, some within and some outside the City. The reasoning of the judgments of the learned judges, who made the Rule for a Prohibition absolute with costs (but not against the plaintiff's attorney, although the Rule was moved for and granted in that form), deserves most attentive consideration.

Lord Coleridge,
C. J.

The first proposition laid down by Lord Coleridge is that, to entitle a plaintiff to sue in the Mayor's Court, the whole of the cause of action must have arisen within the jurisdiction. That no doubt correctly expresses the law as to the Mayor's Court jurisdiction at the time the Mayor's Court Procedure Act was passed, but to lay it down as a rule applicable to all claims, whether below or above £50, is either to ignore altogether a most important section in a statute passed expressly to extend the powers of a local Court, or to impute to the Legislature the intention of at once taking away from a defendant the right to object to the jurisdiction by any proceeding whatsoever, and leaving it open to a Superior Court to prohibit the proceedings in the Inferior Court on the application of a stranger. Be that as it might, that was the rule invariably followed in the Court of Common Pleas in every case brought there from the Mayor's Court. Some of the goods in this case were received in Tooley Street, which appears not to be in the City or the liberties thereof. But then others, again, were received in the City. In respect of all the goods, however,—the order having been given at Poplar—some part of the cause of action arose out of the jurisdiction. The Common Pleas rule, therefore, applied, and the writ for a prohibition must go. Brett, J., doubted at first Brett, J. whether it might not be said that an entire cause of action as to some of the goods arose within the jurisdiction, but the doubt was removed by the argument that where goods are ordered outside the City (inasmuch as order includes price), part of the cause of action at all events arises outside the jurisdiction.

So far we have been dealing with cases in which both the decision and the ratio decidendi were wrong. The next case in the series is one where the conclusion was right, while the ratio decidendi was wrong. In Wirth v. Austin (s), argued before Lord Coleridge, C.J., and Grove and Archibald, JJ., in June, 1875, the plaintiff sued to recover principal and interest due on two cheques for £20 and £12 respectively, purporting to be drawn by the defendant in Huddersfield on a bank having agents in London, where in fact the defendant had no funds. The cheques had been returned marked "not provided for." After judgment had been signed by the plaintiff in the Mayor's Court, a rule for a Prohibition was obtained on the usual affidavit that the cause of action did not wholly arise within the jurisdiction of the Mayor's Court, and that the defendant did not reside or carry on business within the City, &c. After cause shown, the rule was discharged on the ground that, as the plaintiff was not obliged to prove presentment and dishonour in the circumstances of the case (t), he was able to sustain his action without giving evidence of anything that occurred outside the jurisdiction. The allegation, therefore, in the affidavit of the defendant's attorney that the cause of action did not wholly arise within the jurisdiction could not be sustained, and there was no ground for a prohibition. If in the circumstances presentment and dishonour had been a necessary part of the plaintiff's cause of action, inasmuch as the cheques were presented and dishonoured outside the City, the cause of action could not have been said to have wholly arisen within the jurisdiction. Would the rule in that case have been absolute with costs? Undoubtedly it would, on the ground given in Gold v. Turner (u), unless the Court were prepared to reverse their own decision in that case.

Ellis v.
Fleming.
(Jan., 1876.)

The same observation applies to the case of Ellis v. Fleming (x), which came before Brett, Grove, and Denman, JJ., in January, 1876, after the Court of Common Pleas had been converted into a Division of the High Court of Justice. This was an action in the Mayor's Court on a guarantee by the defendants for an attorney's bill of costs, and a Rule for a Prohibition had been granted in the Common Pleas Division on the usual affidavit that the whole cause of action did not (in other words, that part of the cause of action did) arise within the City. On showing cause, the plaintiff's counsel, instead of uselessly contesting the point of jurisdiction, agreed to waive so much of his claim as related to work done out of the City, for which, therefore, according to the doctrine of the Common Pleas, the plaintiff could not sue in the local Court. The Court, not without some misgiving on the part of at least one learned judge, permitted this course to be adopted, and discharged the Rule without costs. Judgment of C. P. D.

Grove, J., appears to have doubted whether payment by the plaintiff of the costs of the Rule ought not to have been made the condition on which it was allowed to be discharged; and, indeed, it seems that logically the learned judge was right in so thinking. Either the defendant was right in asking for a Prohibition, or he was wrong. If he was right—as, according to the Common Pleas, he was—when he obtained the Rule nisi, he was still right when the plaintiff, to avoid the otherwise inevitable Rule absolute, abandoned the objectionable portion of his claim. If the plaintiff had not waived that part, the Rule must have been made absolute with costs against him. Why, then, should the defendant be left to pay his own costs, which would not have been incurred if the plaintiff had not by his own admission claimed more in the first instance than, in the local Court, he was entitled to recover? It is possible that the apparent inconsistency between the decision and the order as to costs may be explained by that which is clearly discernible throughout the observations of Brett, J., namely, a desire to modify the stringency of the rules laid down by the Court of Common Pleas and bring them more into harmony with the rules as to inferior jurisdictions followed by other Divisions of the High Court. The series of cases beginning with Quartly v. Timmins (y) and ending with Ellis v. Fleming (z) may be dismissed with the observation that, although not by name overruled by the Court of Appeal in the case of Hawes v. Paveley (a), every one of those cases must be regarded as having been tainted with the same vice which was eradicated by the last mentioned decision. The Common Pleas Judges did not to say that the 12th section of the Mayor's Court Act was to be regarded as a dead letter. They simply ignored the fact that, unless they were to hold that the Legislature, in enacting that no plea to the jurisdiction should be allowed in a certain class of cases, must have intended to confer an absolute jurisdiction to try any case which came within that class, it was, practically, the same thing as if they in terms decided that the enactment had no meaning. The fons et origo mali, beyond all question, is to be looked for in the unskilfulness of the draftsman who, having it in mind to make the Legislature say that after the passing of the Act the jurisdiction of the Mayor's Court in certain cases should not be challenged by any proceeding whatsoever either in or out of that Court, selected as the vehicle for conveying that idea the words "no plea to the jurisdiction shall be allowed."

Before leaving the 12th Section, it will be necessary to review the decisions of the Common Pleas upon the question how far a mere statement of account in the City constitutes a cause of action or part of a cause of action arising therein, so as to bring a case within the terms of that section?

City.

In Evans v. Nicholson (b), after a verdict for the plaintiff in the Mayor's Court in a claim for goods sold and delivered, a Rule for a Prohibition was obtained in the Court of Common Pleas on the usual ground that the whole cause of action did not arise within the City. On cause being shown, the Rule was discharged on the ground that, although the cause of action founded on the contract had arisen partly out of the jurisdiction—the delivery being outside the City—there was, nevertheless, an entire cause of action founded on an account stated within the jurisdiction. Several letters were posted by the defendant without, which were received by the plaintiff within, the jurisdiction; inasmuch as those letters contained an absolute acknowledgment of the defendant's liability to pay the amount claimed, they were conclusive evidence of an account stated between the parties. There was no doubt that the account was stated at the time when and at the place where the letter containing the acknowledgment was posted. But, as Lord Coleridge observed, it does not follow that, because an account has been stated once, it may not be stated again ; and, accordingly, it was held that the letter was a continuing statement of account, which took effect as a statement of account at the time when and at the place where it was received. But, as the letter was received by the plaintiff in the City, it followed that the account was stated in the City ; and the only question was whether an action in the Mayor's Court could be maintained simply upon proof of an account stated within the jurisdiction. The Court (Lord Coleridge, C.J., Denman, Archibald, and Lindley, JJ.) were all agreed that it could, and discharged the Rule, not without some doubt on the part of Denman, J., as to whether the statement of accounts was sufficiently proved by the production of a written document in the handwriting of the defendant, which the plaintiff swore had been delivered to him at his place of business in the City in the ordinary course of post. The learned judge is reported as having suggested that he would have been more satisfied if there had been some evidence of the account being "stated to some person." It is difficult to see how better evidence of a statement to some person could have been given than the production of a letter written and sent by the defendant to the plaintiff himself.

Wallace v. Allan. (June, 1875.) On the day following that on which Evans v. Nicholson was decided, another case of the same kind came before Lord Coleridge and Grove, Archibald, and Lindley, JJ. In Wallace v. Allan (c) the claim did not exceed £50, and the defendant carried on business in the City. The Mayor's Court, therefore, had an absolute jurisdiction to try the cause. But, because the plaintiffs resided at Brixton, in Surrey, and had there carried on the education of the defendant's daughters in respect of which the claim was made, a Rule had been granted for a Prohibition, although the defendant had taken no step until judgment had been signed and execution issued and the Serjeant-at-Mace was actually in possession. The affidavit of the plaintiffs showed that before action the defendant had, at his place of business in the City, admitted the debt, and promised and made appointments to pay it, which promises and appointments he had failed to keep. It was submitted, on the authority of Evans v. Nicholson (decided on the previous day), that this was evidence of an account stated in the City, and was enough to give the Mayor's Court jurisdiction. Lord Coleridge, however, appears at once to have disposed of this point by remarking that the mere fact that a part of the cause of action arose in Surrey was sufficient to entitle the defendant to a Prohibition, where, as here, the application was not made after trial and verdict. His lordship appears to have had some doubt whether it would have been sufficient if the cause had been already tried and had resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff. The Rule was, therefore, made absolute, with costs. No further observation needs to be made upon this case than that it appears to be inconsistent with Evans v. Nicholson, and that, inasmuch as Evans v. Nicholson has been several times approved and followed, Wallace v. Allan cannot be regarded as an authority on this question of jurisdiction, except to the extent of supporting the proposition that a mere admission of liability within the City will not sustain a claim founded on accounts stated. That is the decision in Wallace v. Allan, according to Brett, J.; as to which it may be remarked that a report of a decision by four learned judges in support of a self-evident proposition was scarcely needed. "A mere admission of liability"—if by that is meant a general admission of indebtedness, without any mention of the specific amount of the debt—is some evidence of an account stated, but is certainly not conclusive evidence of it. It follows, therefore, that, if the only evidence in support of a claim founded on an account alleged to have been stated at a particular place is insufficient to prove that an account was stated anywhere, it will a fortiori be insufficient to prove that it was stated at that particular place.

Jones
(Nov., 1875.)

Question for the Court.

In Taylor v. Jones (d) again, no question as to jurisdiction ought to have arisen, inasmuch as the alternative condition of residence, &c., within the statutory limits was satisfied by the defendant. There was no question that part of the cause of action arose in the City, as the goods had been delivered to the defendant there. The main question discussed in the case was whether the order for goods was, for the purposes of jurisdiction, to be treated as an order given in the City, where the letter was posted, or as an order given in Surrey, where the letter was received by the plaintiff. If it was to be treated as having been given in the City, then the whole cause of action arose within the jurisdiction, and, according to the then received doctrine of the Common Pleas, a Prohibition would not lie. If it was to be treated as having been given in Surrey, then only part of the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction, and, according to the same doctrine, a Prohibition would lie. For the defendant an attempt was made to extend the decision in Evans v. Nicholson (e) (which decided that a letter containing a statement of accounts spoke when and where it was received) into a decision that a letter containing an order spoke only when and where it was received. It is needless to add that this view of Evans v. Nicholson was not adopted, and could not have been adopted, by the Court, inasmuch as such a doctrine would have been directly in the face of the decision in Harris's Case (f) and the other great cases which were there reviewed and approved. It had been decided in Dunlop v. Higgins (g) that a letter containing an offer speaks from the time when and from the place where it is posted, and it was upon that principle, according to Archibald, J. (h), that Evans v. Nicholson was decided. When the Court, therefore, affirmed the decision of Lush, J., at chambers, setting aside the Writ of Prohibition (taken out of the Petty Bag Office in Vacation) on the ground that, the order and delivery being both in the City, the whole cause of action arose within the jurisdiction, they were not overruling Evans v. Nicholson, while they were following Dunlop v. Higgins. It is true that Amphlett, B., made his decision turn on the accident that no letter was written by the plaintiff accepting the defendant's order. As the plaintiff traded in Surrey, any such letter would probably have been posted there, and in that case Amphlett, B., was prepared to hold that the contract was made where the offer was accepted; in other words, that part of the cause of action arose in Surrey. But was the offer accepted in Surrey in such a sense that it cannot be said with equal correctness to have been accepted in the City? The letter containing the order began to speak in the City, where and when it was posted, but it continued speaking until it was received by the person to whom it was sent. Why should it not be said that the answer to that letter, although it began to speak from the moment it was posted in Surrey, continued speaking until it reached the defendant in the City? On the principle of Evans v. Nicholson, such a doctrine would be sound law, as well as good sense.

Taylor v. Nicholls.
(Feb., 1876.)

In Taylor v. Nicholls (i) the defendant did not dwell or carry on business in the City, so that, unless it could be shown that the cause of action either wholly or in part arose therein, the Mayor's Court was liable to a Prohibition.

No jurisdiction except on accounts stated.

Judgment.

The only ground on which it was attempted to show that part of the cause of action arose in the City was that a letter containing what amounted to a statement of accounts by the defendant was received by the plaintiff at his place of business in the City. The Court (Brett, Archibald, and Lindley, JJ.) discharged the rule

(i) L. R. 1 C. P. D. 242; 45 L. J. C. P. 455; 24 W. R. 673. It is obvious from a comparison of the three reports that the judgment of Brett, J., has been mutilated in the report as it appears in the L. R. The Law Report, moreover, omits the reason assigned by Brett, J., for giving no costs to the plaintiff.

without costs on the ground that the letter was some evidence of an account stated in the City, and was consistent with the existence of a cause of action arising there. They did not decide that the claim founded upon "accounts stated" was proved by the letter of the defendant, but that, until the action was tried, the facts were not so clear as to justify a Prohibition. In Evans v. Nicholson, the application was made after verdict, and, consequently, the Court there had materials, which here did not exist, for arriving at the conclusion that there was a complete cause of action which arose within the City. An attempt was made by Archibald, J., to "harmonize" the cases of Evans v. Nicholson and Wallace v. Allan by remarking that the reference made to a trial and verdict in those cases "was addressed to the circumstances under which they came before the Court."

The result of the authorities up to this point seems to be that the High Court will not prohibit the Mayor's Court from proceeding to try a claim founded on an account stated in the City, where there is some evidence to show (1) that there was a statement of accounts; and (2) that it was made in the City. There is no authority, thus far, for the proposition that the High Court will not prohibit the Mayor's Court from issuing execution, or will not set aside an execution issued, on a judgment obtained after a trial in which the evidence did not support the count in the declaration "upon accounts stated," and showed, moreover, that, apart from the alleged statement of account, there was no cause of action which could be said to have arisen in the City. Therefore a plaintiff who should sue in the Mayor's Court a defendant dwelling and carrying on business outside the City and the liberties thereof upon a claim for the price of goods sold and delivered, where both order and delivery took place outside the City, incurred the risk of a Writ of Prohibition setting aside his verdict, judgment, and execution, if it should appear from the evidence called at the trial that the only ground for the assumption of jurisdiction by the Mayor's Court was that the defendant wrote a letter which the plaintiff received in the City and in which the defendant admitted his liability to pay the amount claimed. But it must be remembered that at this stage the Court of Appeal had not decided the case of Hawes v. Paveley.

Bennett v. Cosgriff.
(Feb.,

In Bennett v. Cosgriff (k) part of the goods, for the price of which the action was brought, were ordered by a letter written and posted by the defendant in Liverpool, but received by the plaintiff in the City of London, where in fact he carried on business. It was successfully contended on the part of the plaintiff, upon the argument of the Rule for a Prohibition obtained by the defendant, that, according to Evans v. Nicholson, the order for these goods must be taken to have been given in the City, where the plaintiff received it. For the defendant Taylor v. Jones was relied on, where a letter containing an order for goods was held to speak in the place where it was posted (l), and it was suggested that Evans v. Nicholson had been virtually overruled by the later decision. The Court, however (Denman and Lindley, JJ.), pointed out that the two cases were not really inconsistent.

The view taken in Evans v. Nicholson had been adopted and approved (as was pointed out by Lindley, J.) in Reg. v. Rogers (m) by the Court for the consideration of Crown Cases Reserved, and was now deliberately re-affirmed. The only other point to be noticed in Bennett v. Cosgriff is that it is the first case in which the Common Pleas recognised the doctrine laid down in Hawes v. Paveley, that the Mayor's Court has an absolute jurisdiction to try claims not exceeding £50 where part of the cause of action arises within the City or the liberties thereof.

The only other sections of the Mayor's Court Procedure Act which have the effect, directly or indirectly, of enlarging the jurisdiction of the local Court, and which therefore demand notice here, are those referred to at the outset of this inquiry (n)—sections 13, 32—34, 38, and 48. By the 13th section the Court is empowered, in cases where the cause of action arises within its jurisdiction, to order service on the defendant in any part of England and Wales, and, provided a copy of the order is served at the same time, the defendant is thereby effectually brought within the local jurisdiction, albeit he neither dwells nor carries on business therein. It is for the plaintiff, who seeks to take advantage of this extension of jurisdiction, to make it "satisfactorily appear by affidavit" that the cause of action arose (o) within the jurisdiction; it is for the Court, when satisfied of that, to exercise its discretion by making or refusing to make the desired order, as it shall think fit.

Section 34. third party (and all persons claiming by, from, or under him) may be declared by the Court to be for ever barred from prosecuting his or their claim against the defendant or his representatives.

Section 38. By the 38th section the officer charged with the execution of an order of committal made under the Act is authorized to take the person against whom such order shall have issued, wherever such person shall reside or be, that is to say, whether he be found within or out of the jurisdiction of the local Court, provided he is within the jurisdiction of the High Court of Justice—that is to say, in some part of England or Wales. This section is now practically inoperative.

Section 48 provides for removal of judgments, rules, or orders into Superior Court. The 48th section extends the powers of the Mayor's Court by providing that a final judgment obtained in, and any rule or order made by, that Court, whereby costs become payable to any person, shall become and be of the same force, charge, and effect as a judgment recovered in, or a rule or order made by, one of the Superior Courts, after the Writ of Execution upon such judgment or the rule or order has been sealed by the Sealer of Writs of any of the Superior Courts; and all reasonable costs of sealing are recoverable as if they were part of such judgment, or rule, or order. The Proviso. only proviso by which this extension is guarded is one by which judgments, rules, and orders so removed into the Superior Court are prevented from affecting any lands, tenements, &c., as to purchasers, mortgagees, or creditors any farther than they would have done if they had not been removed, unless and until a Writ of Execution thereon has been actually put into the hands of the Sheriff.

The next question to be considered is how far the local jurisdiction of the Mayor's Court has been, either expressly or in effect, extended by the Judicature Acts. II. JUDICATURE ACT, 1873, (36 & 37 Vict. c. 66) §§ 88—91. Part VI. of the Act of 1873 is intituled "Jurisdiction of Inferior Courts;" as the Mayor's Court undoubtedly ranks in that class, it follows that all the provisions contained in those sections of the Act (§§ 88—91) which affect the Inferior Courts as a class must apply to and affect the Mayor's Court, unless the context clearly shows that they are not intended to apply thereto. How far extended by Judicature Act. Mayor's Court affected by provisions affecting Inferior Courts as a class.

By the 88th section any jurisdiction in Equity or Admiralty which may be conferred on the Mayor's Court (c) by Order in Council—being such as then was or might thereafter be exercised by any County Court—is to be exercised in the manner directed by the Judicature Act. Section 88. Power to confer jurisdiction on Mayor's Court by Order in Council.

It is to be observed that this direction as to the manner of exercising its Equity or Admiralty jurisdiction applies only to such jurisdiction as may be con- Provides for exercise of jurisdiction, if and

The direction, therefore, in no way affects the exercise of that jurisdiction in Equity which the Mayor's Court possessed at the time the Judicature Acts were passed, and which had been exercised for centuries (on what is called its "Equity side") concurrently with and in subordination to the High Court of Chancery, and (since the passing of the Mayor's Court Act) subject to such rules and regulations respecting the removal into Chancery of suits commenced on the Equity side of the Mayor's Court as the Master of the Rolls should draw up under the powers given to him by the 20th section of that Act (d). That Equity jurisdiction, therefore, remaining untouched, it will be convenient to consider shortly its nature and extent, although, by reason of the other provisions of the Judicature Act presently to be considered (e), it is highly improbable that any more "bills" will be filed on the Equity side of the Mayor's Court.

Nature and extent of Equity jurisdiction prior to Judicature Acts.

Rule before M. C. L. P. Act, 1857. No jurisdiction to grant relief Before the Mayor's Court Act it was necessary, in order to give that Court jurisdiction to grant relief on its Equity side, that the cause of action (which must be here understood to mean all the facts which gave the plaintiff his right to relief) accrued within the local jurisdiction. Did anything in the Act alter that rule as to suits on the Chancery side of the Court? Clearly, the 12th section—which deals with “actions” wherein the plaintiff seeks to recover debt or damages up to £50—does not affect suits praying for relief of various kinds in which the recovery of a sum of money is not an essential element. It is equally clear that a defendant in such a suit is not forbidden by section 15 from taking his objection to the jurisdiction of the Mayor’s Court, if he so please, by applying for a certiorari or special order under the provisions of sections 20 and 52 (f). The 20th section prohibits the removal into Chancery of any suit commenced on the Equity side of the Mayor’s Court without the special order of one of the Chancery judges “upon application for that purpose made;” and it further limits the discretion of the judge to whom such application is made by providing that he shall not make the order of removal if he “shall consider that the matter in question in the said suit is fit to be tried in the Mayor’s Court.” What is meant by the words “fit to be tried” is not quite free from doubt. At first sight one would think that the Legislature thereby intended that, in all cases where, from the absence of any complexity in the facts and the elementary character of the relief sought, there was no reason to suppose that the Mayor’s Court would not administer Equity quite as efficiently as (and far more cheaply than) the High Court of Chancery, the where subject-matter out of City. Section 12 of M. C. L. P. Act, 1857, does not apply.

Nor does section 15 interfere with a defendant in such suit who applies for a certiorari or a special order of removal under sections 20 and 52 of the same Act. Section 20 considered.

No suit to be removed into Chancery if “fit to be tried” in the Mayor’s Court. What is meant by a suit being fit to be tried in a local Court.

exercise of its equitable jurisdiction should not be interfered with. The mere fact that the Mayor's Court, in giving the relief sought, would be dealing with persons and causes of action not within its jurisdiction would scarcely make the case in that sense "unfit to be tried" in that Court, although it might form good ground for a Writ of Prohibition.

Davies v.
M'Henry.

(Nov.
1867.)

Facts.

The 52nd section prohibits the removal of any cause from the Mayor's Court otherwise than by a Writ of Certiorari, the order of a Common Law judge, or the special order of a Chancery judge. In the case of Davies v. M'Henry (g) the cause was removed by certiorari. In that case a Paris banker sued Mrs. Davies in the Mayor's Court for two sums advanced by him on drafts drawn on bankers in the City, and caused an attachment to be issued against her banking account with Roberts & Co. She put in bail, paid a sum into Court, and pleaded coverture. The plaintiff went on, and was nonsuited. Thereupon he filed a bill on the Equity side of the Mayor's Court, praying that he might be paid his debts out of Mrs. Davies's separate estate. Mrs. Davies then filed a bill of certiorari in Chancery against the banker and her husband, praying that the suit commenced on the Equity side of the Mayor's Court might be removed into the Court of Chancery. The grounds of the prayer were not that the matter in question in the said suit was not "fit to be tried" in the Mayor's Court, but that neither did any of the parties reside, nor was the subject-matter of the suit, within the jurisdiction of that Court, and that the cause of action did not arise there. The usual process of proving the suggestions in the bill was gone through, and the suit was retained and a decree granted in the High Court of Chancery.

We come now to two very important sections of the Judicature Act, as regards their effect on the administration of justice in the Mayor's Court. Sections 89 and 90,

By the 89th Section that Court, as one of the Mayor's Court Inferior Courts having jurisdiction at Law and in Equity, is both empowered and directed (as regards enabled and directed to give relief to plaintiffs and defendants within its jurisdiction to same extent as High Court of Justice. all causes of action within its jurisdiction for the time being) to grant, in any proceeding before it, such relief, redress, or remedy, or combination of remedies, either absolute or conditional, and to give such and the like effect to every ground of defence or counterclaim, equitable or legal, as fully and amply as might or ought to be done in the like case by the High Court of Justice.

Whatever may be thought of this section from the point of view of a grammarian, its meaning is plain enough. Its provisions do not apply to a cause of action which is not within the local jurisdiction. Nor do they give the local Court power to deal with matters that are not involved in some "proceeding" before itself. But, given the jurisdiction and the proceeding, it has the same powers as the High Court of Justice (h), and is, moreover, bound to exercise them. As regards plaintiffs, whatever relief, redress, or remedy might be had in the High Court, is to be granted by Observations on section 89, As to plaintiffs,

(h) Among the powers conferred by this section on the "Inferior Courts having jurisdiction at Law and in Equity," is the power of enforcing their decrees by attachment in case of disobedience; per the Mayor's Court. As regards defendants, whatever would supply a ground of defence or counterclaim, equitable or legal, in the High Court, is to have the same effect given to it (up to a certain point) in the Mayor's Court.

By the 90th section it is provided, on the one hand, that the competence and the duty of the Mayor's Court to dispose of the whole matter in controversy—so far as plaintiff and defendant are concerned—shall not be affected by the accident that, in any proceeding before it, a defence or counterclaim involves matter beyond the local jurisdiction, and, on the other hand, that no relief exceeding that which the Mayor's Court has jurisdiction to administer shall be given to the defendant upon any such counterclaim. When that point is reached at which the Mayor's Court, by giving further relief to a defendant on his counterclaim, would be going beyond the relief which it has jurisdiction to administer, a provision is made whereby, on the application of any party (i), the High Court of Justice may order the whole proceedings to be transferred to itself, where they are to be continued and prosecuted, as if they had been originally commenced therein.

By the 91st section it is provided that the several rules of law enacted and declared by the Judicature Act, 1873, are to be in force and to receive effect in the Mayor's Court, so far as the matters to which such rules relate shall be cognisable by (i.e., within the jurisdiction of) that Court. What those rules of law prescribe may be ascertained by a reference to section 25 of the Judicature Act, and the several sub-sections thereof (k). They have no application where the matters to which they relate are matters not cognisable by the Mayor's Court; but, on the other hand, where the matters to which they relate are matters of which the Mayor's Court may properly take cognisance, those rules are to be in force and to receive effect in that Court.

The effect of the two sections (89 & 90) read together on the jurisdiction of the Mayor's Court is so clear that it scarcely needed any authority to support the proposition that this jurisdiction to entertain claims (when set up by defendants) not properly within the cognisance of the local Court was conferred solely with the view of enabling the local Court to dispose of litigation so far as it is competent to do so, and was not intended to alter the status of the Court as a purely local tribunal. If authority were required for that proposition, it is to be found in the case of Davis v. the Flagstaff Silver Mining Company of Utah (l).

This was an action on two promissory notes made by the defendant Company's Secretary for £100 and £400 respectively. The defendants pleaded never indebted, payment; set off, and, by way of counterclaim, set up a claim for £89,000 for money had and received. The plaintiff applied by summons at Chambers for a prohibition, and Field, J., referred the summons to the Common Pleas Division. Grove and Lindley, JJ., refused to order a prohibition, on the ground that the Legislature intended to enable a defendant, sued in an Inferior Court, to set up, by way of answer to the plaintiff's claim, a counterclaim against the plaintiff which he could not have set up as an original claim except in the High Court. He was not to be deprived of the right to rely on the defence afforded by his counterclaim because the plaintiff elected to sue him in a Court of limited jurisdiction. So far the Mayor's Court jurisdiction was enlarged for the benefit of defendant. But this extension did not go a step farther. The local Court might entertain a cause of action arising altogether beyond the local jurisdiction, but was not to grant relief to the defendant beyond the point at which his claim overtook the plaintiff's; in other words, it was not at liberty to deal with the defendant as if he were the plaintiff in a cross action. That such was undoubtedly the right construction of the two sections read together is made abundantly clear by the judgments of

Fundamental
aim of Judicature
Acts.

Brett, Cotton, and Thesiger, LJJ., in the Court of Appeal. According to Brett, L.J., every section and every rule in the Judicature Acts is to be construed with reference to the fundamental object which the Legislature had in view—that object being to enable any Court before which any controversy is brought to determine all matters in dispute between the parties. Where that object is attainable in an Inferior Court without encroaching on the jurisdiction of the High Court of Justice, it is unnecessary to say that the Inferior Court is both competent and bound to dispose of the whole matter in controversy. Where that object is not attainable in the Inferior Court without transgressing the limits of the local jurisdiction, the Inferior Court must be content to discharge the duty cast upon it by the Legislature of disposing of the whole matter in controversy only "so far as relates to the demand of the plaintiff and the defence thereto." So long as it does not overstep the line drawn by section 90, the Mayor's Court is in no danger of a prohibition from the High Court. In the particular case before the Court no act (as Thesiger, L.J., observed) had been committed by the Mayor's Court showing that it had exceeded, or was about to exceed, its duty or its jurisdiction. Up to that moment, therefore, the plaintiff had no ground for his application, which was accordingly refused. If, however, the plaintiff had waited until the Mayor's Court had committed an excess of jurisdiction by giving the defendant relief quod plaintiff on the counterclaim, his application would have been justifiable, and, if the High Court had not ordered a prohibition to go, it would certainly, on the application of either party, have ordered the proceedings to be transferred from the Mayor's Court to one of the Common Law Divisions under section 90.

The subject of jurisdiction may be dismissed with the remark that, subject, on the one hand, to the limitations imposed by the rules applying to Courts having no general but only a local jurisdiction, and to the effect, on the other hand, of statutory enactments intended to enlarge its powers as a local Court, the Mayor's Court has at Common Law a concurrent jurisdiction with the High Court of Justice in all having been commenced against him, and that unless he appears within eight days of the service thereof, judgment will be issued against him by default. The document thus filled up is then sealed or stamped with the Mayor's Court seal, and must be personally served on the defendant. Where attempts have been made to serve the defendant personally without success, the Court will, upon an affidavit of the facts, make an order for substituted service, as in the High Court (c). Where the defendant is out of the jurisdiction—that is to say, where he neither resides nor carries on business in the City of London, but is to be found in some part of England or Wales—the plaintiff should apply ex parte for an order for service out of the jurisdiction, supporting his application by an affidavit from which “it shall satisfactorily appear that the cause of action arises within the jurisdiction of the Court” (d). Having obtained his order, he must serve the defendant with a copy of the same, together with the sealed copy plaint served in pursuance thereof, as otherwise the service of a plaint will not be valid or effectual, whereas, provided that is done, “all proceedings in the cause shall be had and taken as if the defendant had been duly served within the jurisdiction” (e). The penalty attaching to neglect of this precaution is that, if the Court on the defendant's application order particulars to be delivered (where the declaration has been delivered without any), the plaintiff will in any event be allowed no costs in respect of the defendant's application, or in respect of the particulars he may deliver pursuant to the order of the Court (h). The plaintiff is not bound by the particulars set out in the notice at the foot of the plaint, but, should the particulars he delivers with or after Declaration not correspond with the former, and should the defendant, on delivery of the later particulars, satisfy the plaintiff's claim by payment, the Court will not allow the plaintiff any costs beyond the costs of plaint and service, if it should be of opinion that the settlement of the action was delayed by reason of the erroneous statement of the plaintiff's demand in the first instance.

This must, in the absence of consent, be done not later than the fourth day before the day mentioned in the notice of trial, or—where the defendant is to take short notice—not later than the second day. Should the last day for giving countermand be a Sunday, it must be given on the previous Saturday. The penalty attaching to neglect in this particular is that a plaintiff who, having given notice of trial, neither gives due notice of countermand nor proceeds to trial, must pay the costs of the day incurred through his negligence.

Plaintiff neglecting to countermand and not proceeding to trial pays costs of day. The Record—a parchment document, on which is engrossed a transcript of the pleadings up to joinder of issue—is made up by the plaintiff, who adds what is called the Similiter ("and the plaintiff doth the like." "Therefore," &c.), and lodged with the Registrar within two days of the day mentioned in the notice of trial (Sunday not being reckoned as one). Together with the Record must be lodged a copy of plaintiff's particulars of demand, and of defendant's particulars (if any) of set-off or counterclaim. Unless this be done, the cause will not be entered in the day's list.

The Record. When it must be lodged. Copy of particulars lodged at same time. A printed cause list for each sittings of the Court is made out and published at the office, but the plaintiff may enter his cause at any time after such list is made out and published.

Entry of cause in list.

(B.) By Defendant.

By defendant.

Having been served with a sealed copy of the plaint having particulars of claim and a notice calling on him to appear appended thereto, the defendant has eight clear days in which to enter an appearance, unless the eighth day is a Sunday or a dies non, in which case his time expires on the evening of the seventh day. As any objection to an irregularity in the plaintiff's procedure is waived by appearance, the defendant, before appearing, must decide whether it is worth his while to take advantage of the plaintiff's ignorance or carelessness. A nullity is not and cannot be made good by waiver, and the defendant, therefore, is not estopped from raising, after appearance, the objection that a particular proceeding is null and void.

Time for appearance eight clear days.

No informality can be objected to after appearance.

An appearance is entered by lodging at the office of the Court a præcipe in the prescribed form (l), and a sealed notice of the appearance, also in proper form, must then be sent to the plaintiff either by post or by hand, but in any case it must be delivered in time to prevent him from signing judgment, which he is entitled to do on the morning of the ninth day. A notice which does not bear the seal of the Court may be treated by the plaintiff as a nullity, and, if he signs judgment as for default of appearance, the Court will not set aside his judgment unless satisfied by affidavit that the defendant has a defence on the merits, and then only on payment of costs. If sued in a wrong name, the defendant should appear in his right name, adding the words, "sued as, &c.," in a parenthesis.

Defendant's course where he admits something to be due. Application for order to stay. Where plaintiff accepts sum tendered.

The defendant, having duly appeared and having given the plaintiff due notice thereof, must next consider whether he means to resist the claim either wholly or in part. If he is willing to pay part but not the whole, he should at once apply for an order to stay on payment of £—— (naming the sum he tenders, as admitted by him to be due), with costs. He must give the plaintiff notice of this application, and, should the plaintiff not attend, the order to stay will be made on an affidavit of service of notice. If the plaintiff attends and accepts the amount tendered in satisfaction of his claim, the action is at an end, and, if the Court should be of opinion that he claimed more on his plaint than was really due, he will get no more than the bare costs of entering the action. If the plaintiff will not accept the amount tendered or any amount less than that claimed, the Registrar marks the application to that effect, and the action goes on, with this consequence to the defendant that, if the plaintiff subsequently accepts the amount already tendered and refused, the defendant will be entitled to all costs incurred subsequently to the application and refusal, and may set them off against any costs to which the plaintiff may be entitled.

Where plaintiff claims more.

Where defendant admits no part of claim.

Demand of declaration a four

If the defendant admits no part of the claim, he should, within two days of his notice of appearance, demand a Declaration, and, unless this demand is complied with in four days or in such extended time as the plaintiff may, on application, obtain for declaring, he may sign judgment for want of prosecution, with the usual ^{day} demand costs.

When the Declaration is delivered, the defendant should, if he find that the particulars (if any) sent therewith do not afford him any or sufficient information as to the nature of the plaintiff's claim or the mode in which the amount thereof is arrived at to enable him to say whether he will dispute the whole or part only, he should apply for an order for further and better particulars. If no particulars have been delivered either before or with the Declaration, the defendant, before applying to the Court to order them, should consider whether he really requires any information beyond that afforded by the statement of claim on the plaint and by the declaration. If, after due consideration, he should find himself embarrassed for lack of explicit information, he should apply for an order. But in most cases the better course is not to wait for the Declaration, but to apply for the order before he enters an appearance.

The defendant, having received the Declaration with a demand of plea, has four days in which to plead. There are certain formalities indispensable in the case of Pleas, unless, by replying or joining issue, the plaintiff waives the irregularity. They should be dated the day of their delivery, and be signed by the defendant's solicitor, with his address. If not so dated and signed, the plaintiff may sign judgment as for default of plea (if he has served the defendant with a demand), and a judgment so signed will not be set aside except on an affidavit of merits and payment of costs by the defendant, where there is good reason for believing that his only object in pleading is delay. In the absence of any ground for such belief, a plaintiff who signs judgment as for default of plea where the pleading is merely informal will have no costs of judgment allowed on the defendant's application to set it aside, unless he has pointed out the irregularity to the defendant, and has given him time to cure it.

Practice
as to payment into Court.

If the defendant determines to pay money into Court, he must plead such payment, and pay the sum named in his plea to the Registrar, who marks a receipt for the amount in the margin of the plea, which the plaintiff must produce before he can take the money out of Court (m). If the plaintiff replies that the sum paid into Court is not enough to satisfy his claim and if the issue thereon be found in favour of the defendant, the latter will be entitled to judgment and costs from the delivery of the Replication. If the plaintiff accepts the sum (paid into Court as to part) in satisfaction of his whole claim, he replies acceptance as to the part to which payment is pleaded, and a nolle prosequi as to the residue (n). The plaintiff will then have his costs on the payment into Court, while the defendant will be entitled to costs on the nolle prosequi. If the plaintiff takes the money out of Court in satisfaction of the cause of action in respect of which it is paid in, and replies to the other pleas of the defendant, he cannot tax his costs as to that part of the cause of action to which the money has been paid into Court until the action is at an end, when he will be entitled, in any event, to the costs of that part of the claim. If, where the plaintiff elects to go on as to the residue, the defendant succeeds on the plea of payment into Court, the latter is entitled to his costs after, as well as before, Replication, and, on the other pleas, to his costs from the instructions for pleas.

To what costs defendant is entitled if successful on the plea of payment into Court.

A plea or pleas may be withdrawn by the defendant at any time by consent of the plaintiff, but, if this be withheld, only by leave of the Court.

Withdrawing pleas.

Where the defendant pleads a set-off by way of defence to the plaintiff's claim, he should, with his pleas, deliver particulars of set-off, as, if he should neglect to do so and the Court should afterwards, on the plaintiff's application, order them to be delivered, the defendant will in no event be allowed any costs of the application or of the particulars he may afterwards deliver (o). When an order for particulars is made, it generally provides that, in default of compliance with the order, the defendant shall not be allowed to give evidence of the set-off at the trial. If, instead of pleading a set-off under the system now obsolete in the Superior Courts, the defendant wishes to set up a counterclaim, equitable or legal, to which the Mayor's Court (under section 89 of the Judicature Act, 1873) is bound to give effect as fully and amply as might or should be done in the High Court of Justice, he must pay due regard to, although not bound by, the Rules of the Practice where plaintiff makes a cross claim for damages or other relief governed by Rules of Supreme Court.

(o) This was the practice in the Common Law Courts under r. 19, H. T. 1853. Day's C. L. P. Acts, ed. 4.

Supreme Court scheduled to the Act of 1875, the most important of which, perhaps, is that which requires a defendant, who seeks to rely on any facts as supporting a right of set-off or counterclaim, to "state specifically that he does so by way of set-off or counterclaim" (p).

Difference between set-off and counter-claim.

The practical difference between a set-off and a counterclaim in the Mayor's Court is that the defendant in the one case expresses his willingness to set off against the plaintiff's claim in the action a debt due to him from the plaintiff, while, in the other case, he makes a substantive claim which he seeks to recover as debt or as damages, and which, if established, entitles him to a verdict and costs on the counterclaim. If the amount claimed by the defendant be larger than that claimed by the plaintiff in the action, and if the defendant succeed in the whole of his claim, while the plaintiff succeeds in the original action, or if the defendant recover a larger amount than is recovered by the plaintiff, the defendant is entitled to a verdict for the balance after deducting the one amount from the other (q), and to judgment in the action. Where the balance is in plaintiff's favour, that balance is the only amount which can be said to have been "recovered" within the meaning of the provisions of the County Court Acts as to costs (r).

and Pollock, B., are reported to have held that a plaintiff who established a claim to £114, but whose claim was cut down by a successful counterclaim to under £5, had "recovered" the larger amount within the meaning of s. 5 of the County Courts Act, 1867, and was therefore entitled to have his costs taxed.

Replication, which must, where the defendant has set up a counterclaim, include a defence to such claim, in addition to a joinder of issue on the other pleas, and must be delivered (unless the time is extended) in four days. In the case of cross claims, the action cannot be at issue until the plaintiff has replied to the counterclaim and the defendant has (if called upon) rejoined to such reply, which he must do within two days.

Where the action has been at issue ten days, or where a sitting of the Court has been held at which the plaintiff might have entered it for trial, or where he has set it down and countermanded it, the defendant is at liberty to set the cause down for trial per proviso, and must give the plaintiff notice of his having so done.

Four days' notice must be given to the plaintiff to bring in the record to the Registrar's office. If this be not brought in within two days of the day appointed for the trial, the defendant may make up and lodge a record, and will be entitled to the costs of so doing, provided due notice has been given to the plaintiff, but not otherwise.

The fact that the defendant has set down the cause per proviso neutralises any notice of countermand which may have been given by the plaintiff.

2. PROCEEDINGS AT THE TRIAL.

The practice and procedure in trials of issues in fact before a jury or before the Judge without a jury are, as far as possible, identical with those which obtain in Westminster Hall (s). There is one peculiarity, however, which deserves the special attention of practitioners and litigants who are unfamiliar with the idiosyncrasies of the Mayor's Court. The Judge having taken his seat at the advertised time, the cause-list for the day is read over by the officer of the Court for the purpose and as a means of ascertaining, as early as may be, how many and which of the cases in the list are really to be tried. If, when the case (say) of Brown v. Robinson is called, the plaintiff's counsel answers, while there is no answer on the part of the defendant, it is at once presumed that the defendant does not intend to appear, and the jury are forthwith sworn to try, and then and there proceed to try, the case as undefended—a process which, provided the plaintiff's witnesses are ready, occupies a very few minutes. If, on the other hand, the mention of the case produces no response on the part of the plaintiff, while the defendant's counsel or solicitor announces that the case is defended, the same presumption is raised against the plaintiff, and the cause is then and there struck out of the list, in which it will be re-instated (unless the circumstances are exceptional) only on payment of costs of the day. The same process is continued until it has been ascertained which cases in the list are to be tried at all, and, of those, which are to be taken as undefended. This practice renders it absolutely necessary that every plaintiff, who does not wish his cause to be struck out and himself to be fined in the costs of the day, should be in Court with his solicitor and witnesses at the time appointed for the sitting of the Court. The same remark applies to those defendants who have a bond fide defence and have not resisted the plaintiff's claim merely for the purpose of gaining time. And, lastly, it ^{And their witnesses.} equally applies to those who are subpoenaed as witnesses on either side. Solicitors should take the necessary steps to secure the attendance of their witnesses at the sitting of the Court, and in no case is this precaution more advisable than in a case which there is reason to believe will, at the last moment, be undefended. A cause of this nature may be last in a list of ten or twelve causes, but, by reason of all the prior causes being announced as defended, it may be called on within five minutes after the Judge has taken his seat. Assuming that the plaintiff's counsel (or rather plaintiff's counsel's brief) is in Court, there is no reason why the case should not be disposed of in a few minutes, provided the witnesses are forthcoming. If, unhappily, they are not to be found when wanted, and if the consequences are disastrous to the plaintiff, it may be difficult to say on whom the blame ought to lie, but it is easy to see on whom it will, in fact, be laid.

Assuming the case to have been tried, and a nonsuit ^{Verdict} to have been ordered or a verdict for plaintiff or defendant found ^{when found is entered on record.} without any points of law having been raised or leave to move reserved, the nonsuit or verdict is entered on the record by the Registrar.

The successful party is then entitled to have the record Postea, and enter the postea, as to which the practice is the same as in the Superior Courts before the Judicature Acts.

next day may tax his costs and sign judgment (t);
but he must not issue execution without the leave of the Court (obtainable on taxation) until the day after sought to be recovered in the action exceeds £20, the successful party must not issue execution until the third day after the verdict or nonsuit, the unsuccessful party having two days within which to give notice of appeal (u). He may, however, give notice to tax and proceed to judgment, and, having taxed his costs on the second day, may on the third day issue execution, if no notice of appeal has been given by his opponent, but he cannot (without leave) have execution until the day following that on which the costs are taxed. This is on the assumption that no order has been made for a stay of execution, which may always be applied for, either

Where interest is required, there must be an indorsement stating the date from which it runs, nor must the rate be higher than four per cent., unless the parties have agreed that a higher rate shall be secured by the judgment. In every case of execution, the party entitled thereto may levy the poundage-fees and expenses of the same over and above the sum recovered (v). As to the proceedings necessary to revive judgments and other proceedings by and against persons not parties to the record, no more needs be said than that the practice is governed by sections 128—134 of the C. L. P. Act, 1852.

The verdict of a jury will not be set aside nor will a new trial be ordered by the Mayor's Court, unless the Court is satisfied either that the jury were wrongly directed by the Judge, or that evidence material to some issue before the jury was improperly received or rejected; or that the verdict was against the evidence, or that, owing to surprise, mistake, or misconduct, there has been a palpable miscarriage of justice. ground of being against the weight of evidence (x), and therefore, if challenged, must be challenged on the ground that the findings are wrong or that the conclusion he has drawn from the findings is wrong in law. No new trial can be granted on the ground that the Judge at the trial ruled that the stamp on any document was sufficient, or that any document tendered in evidence did not require a stamp (y). Where, however, a document formally tendered in evidence is rejected by the Judge on the ground of the absence or insufficiency of stamp, such ruling affords good ground for an application to set aside a non-suit or verdict, and for a new trial (z).

Where judge overrules objection to sufficiency of stamp or to admission of unstamped document, no ground for new trial; otherwise, where judge allows such objection and rejects document on that ground. Practice in M. C. on motions for new trial. Where Court sits to hear motions on a day within the time for moving, the motion should be made in Court. Stay of execution may be had of

The practice as to applications for a new trial in the Mayor's Court is regulated more or less by the circumstances in which the trial takes place. As the rule is to fix one day in every sittings for motions and arguments, it may happen that an opportunity for moving for a new trial occurs within a day or two of the trial, in which case the motion may and should be made in Court for a rule to show cause. Where, however, this opportunity is not likely to occur, the party aggrieved by the verdict may take either of two alternative courses. He may either apply at once to the Judge for a stay of execution until he has had an opportunity of moving, or he may apply to the Registrar, who will always order a stay where reasonable grounds are shown. The applicant should be prepared with an affidavit in support of the latter application, if required.

So far we have been dealing with appeals in the Mayor's Court. We now propose to deal with appeals from that Court, as to which not a little confusion appears to prevail. By the Mayor's Court Procedure Act two objects were attained, or supposed to be attained, in reference to appeals from that Court. The first of these objects—the facilitation of proceedings in error on matters arising in that Court—was effected by the provisions of the fourth section, which made the Court of Exchequer Chamber, in all cases of error arising on proceedings, the Court of Error for the purposes of that Act in lieu of the Court of St. Martin's-le-Grand (d). It was further provided by the same section that "all matters in error" should be proceeded with according to the rules to be framed for that purpose, which rules (by section 45) were to be signed by the Judge of the Mayor's Court, and were not to be of any force until allowed and confirmed by three of the Judges of the Superior Courts. No such rules have ever been framed for the purpose, possibly owing to the fact that the provisions of the sections of the C. L. P. Act, 1852, (ss. 146—167) relating to proceedings in error were by Order in Council directed to extend and apply to the Mayor's Court (e), and were deemed to render the framing of other rules of procedure superfluous. Without speculating on the cause, it is enough to say that, as no such rules as are contemplated by sections 4 and 45 of the Mayor's Court Act exist, it has been impossible to regulate the proceedings in error thereby.

Inconvenience arising from absence of rules. Simpson v. Henning, (June, 1875.)

The inconvenience supposed to arise from the failure on the part of the Mayor's Court Judge to carry out the intention of the Legislature was remarked in the case of Simpson v. Henning (f), which was an appeal to the Exchequer Chamber from the judgment of the Mayor's Court on cross demurrers, that Court having allowed the demurrer to one of the defendant's pleas.

(f) L. R. 10 Q. B. 406.

On the case coming into the Exchequer Chamber, plaintiff's counsel objected to the jurisdiction, and the case stood over for inquiry into the practice; and, the result being to show that, in the absence of rules, the practice was to bring the record into the Exchequer Chamber through the Court of Queen's Bench, the objection to jurisdiction was withdrawn and the judgment of the Mayor's Court was affirmed on the merits.

When the jurisdiction and powers of the Court of Exchequer Chamber were transferred by the Judicature Act (g) to the Court of Appeal, it became necessary to regard the fourth section of the Mayor's Court Procedure Act as amended by substituting "Her Majesty's Court of Appeal" for "the Exchequer Chamber." This appears too obvious to need more than a bare statement, but, nevertheless, it has been the subject of a decision in the High Court of Justice. In the case of Le Blanch v. Reuter's Telegram Company (h), error had arisen on the proceedings in the Mayor's Court, the Judge of that Court having allowed the defendant's demurrer to the plaintiff's Replication. Leave being reserved, the case was then taken, on notice of motion, before the Court of Appeal from Inferior Courts, sitting under section 45 of the Judicature Act. The learned Judges (Bramwell, B., and Mellor and Denman, JJ.) held that they had no jurisdiction, sitting as a Division of the High Court under section 45, to review the judgment as a Court of Error from the Mayor's Court, that jurisdiction having been transferred to the Court of Appeal.

When the Exchequer Chamber was replaced by Her Majesty's Court of Appeal, the latter became Court of Error from Mayor's Court.

Procedure There being no doubt as to the tribunal to which an regulating appeals under section 4 to Court of Appeal. appeal lies under section 4 of the Mayor's Court Act, the further question arises, by what procedure are such appeals to be regulated. The Exchequer Chamber has gone, and with it have gone "Error," bills of exceptions, and such other procedure as had survived the Common Law Procedure Acts. Although the Court of Appeal has inherited the jurisdiction and powers of the Court of Exchequer Chamber, it has not preserved the practice or procedure of that Court. All appeals to Her Majesty's Court of Appeal are by way of re-hearing, and are initiated by giving notice of motion simply, without further formality. It is clear, then, that as the Court of Appeal is master of its own procedure, the only way in which an appeal under the fourth section can be brought from the Mayor's Court to the Court of Appeal is by motion after due notice given. Practically, the appeals under this section are now limited to

Inasmuch as no judgment can be given by the Court of Appeal on a demurrer without having the record before it, it is clear that the record must be taken up from the Mayor's Court by the appellant.

The practice and procedure in appeals from the Mayor's Court, other than proceedings in error, are regulated by the eighth, ninth, and tenth sections of the Mayor's Court Procedure Act. In practice, the mode of appeal provided for by sections 8 and 9 has been found too cumbrous to be of much service, and section 10 is the one commonly resorted to by those who are dissatisfied with any determination or direction of the Mayor's Court in point of law. It will suffice, therefore, to remark as to the appeal under sections 8 and 9 that it can only be resorted to in actions for over £20; that it must be in the form of a case, which (if the parties do not agree) must be settled and signed by the Judge and transmitted by the Registrar to the Crown Office Master; that notice of appeal must be given to "the other party" within two days after such determination or direction; that security for costs must be given, if the Judge shall so direct, to such amount and within Section 10. Proceedings under, not called appeals. Neither party can move without leave which must be granted "upon the trial." In section 10 the word "appeal" is not to be found, nor is anything said about the amount sought to be recovered in the action (l). The first condition imposed by the section on the party aggrieved by the result of a trial is that leave to move in a Superior Court must have been granted by the Judge "upon the trial." Where such leave is refused, or is not granted "upon the trial," the Superior Court has no jurisdiction to hear the motion. It must, therefore, be not only asked for but granted "upon the trial," and these words have been decided to mean "within a reasonable time of the trial" (m). Where the plaintiff being nonsuited asked for leave to move, and the leave was refused at the time, but the Judge, after reconsideration, decided to grant leave and did so accordingly on the fourth day after the trial, it was held by Bovill, C. J., and Keating and Grove, JJ. (Brett, J., dissenting), that the leave had not been granted "upon the trial." Whatever may be the value of that case as an authority at the present day, it is obvious that the proper time to ask for "leave to move" is at the close of the trial in which the Judge has directed or declined to direct a nonsuit or a verdict,

or has allowed or overruled an objection to the reception of evidence, as the case may be. It is the duty of the Judge to administer the law to the best of his ability, but, as he may be wrong, he never refuses the desired leave (which is substantially, though not technically, a leave to appeal from his own ruling) in any case that is fairly arguable. In nine cases out of ten the leave is granted (if at all) when it is applied for, so that, if applied for "upon the trial," it is granted "upon the trial." Next, it is to be observed that the only applications which can be made under this section are applications in the High Court to set aside the verdict or nonsuit, as the case may be, and enter a verdict the other way, or to have a new trial. The time for moving is "such period of time after the trial as motions of the like kind shall from time to time be permitted to be made" in the Superior Court in which the party has been given leave to move. Leave may be given to move in any of "the Superior Courts," which, according to the interpretation section (54) of the Act, means in any of "Her Majesty's Superior Courts of Common Law at Westminster" or, in other words, the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer. Those Courts having ceased to exist as independent Superior Courts, but still existing as Divisions of the High Court of Justice, it would seem to follow that the words "any of the Superior Courts" must now be read as if they were "any of the three Common Law Divisions of the High Court of Justice." The time, then, for moving under this section is the same as the time allowed by the Rules of the Supreme Court, namely, within four days after the trial.

The motion is ex parte for a rule to show cause, and the Division of the High Court to which it is made is "authorised and empowered" by section 10 to grant or refuse such rule, and, when granted, to hear and determine the merits thereof, and to make such orders thereupon (including costs) as it shall think proper (n). The rule, when granted, operates as a stay of proceedings until the determination thereof.

Where the result of the hearing is an order that a new trial be had, an office copy of the order or rule absolute is to be delivered to the Registrar, and thereupon the action proceeds to trial de novo according to the practice of the Mayor's Court. Where the result is that the rule is ordered to be discharged, the party in whose favour such order is made is at liberty, on delivering an office copy thereof to the Registrar, to proceed in his action as if no such rule nisi had been obtained. Where the High Court sets aside the verdict or nonsuit, as the case may be, and orders the verdict to be entered for the other party, judgment is to be entered accordingly [by the Registrar on production of an office copy of the order].

So far we have been dealing with the procedure and practice in appeals by leave of the Judge, under the tenth section of the Mayor's Court Act. That section clearly intends the determination of the appeal by the Superior Court to be final and conclusive. But by the Order in Council of Nov. 17, 1863, the 34th section of the C. L. P. Act, 1854, was (with many others) extended and applied to the Mayor's Court. By that section it was enacted that, "in all cases of rules to enter a verdict or nonsuit upon a point reserved at the trial, if the rule to show cause be refused or granted and then discharged or made absolute, the party decided against may appeal." Then by section 41 (also applied to the Mayor's Court) it is enacted "that the Court of Appeal (that is, the Exchequer Chamber or the House of Lords,) shall give such judgment as ought to have been given in the Court below; and all such further proceedings may be taken thereupon as if the judgment had been given in the Court in which the record had originated."

It must be observed that section 34 is confined to "rules to enter a verdict or nonsuit upon a point reserved," &c., and does not deal with motions for a new trial; the latter are provided for by section 35, which is not extended or applied to the Mayor's Court. The result is that, within one month after the publication of the said Order in Council in the "Gazette," a party moving under section 10 of the M. C. L. P. Act, 1857, in one of the Superior Courts at Westminster for "a rule to enter a verdict or a nonsuit upon a point reserved at the trial" was at liberty to appeal to the Exchequer Chamber and thence to the House of Lords from any decision against him, whether that decision took the form of a refusal to grant a rule nisi, or of an order discharging his rule after cause shown. The same liberty to appeal was also extended to the party called upon to show cause, if he should become a "party decided against." On the other hand, the provisions of section 10 of the M. C. L. P.

Act, 1857, as to the effect of an order discharging or making absolute a rule for a new trial by the Superior Court remained in force, and the determination of such Court, so far as new trials were concerned, was still to be final and without appeal. Such was the law as to appeals from the Mayor's Court when the Judicature Acts were passed. By the 45th section of the Act of 1873 it was provided that all appeals, whether from sessions, from a County Court, or from any other Inferior Court, which might before that Act have been brought to any Court or Judge whose jurisdiction was by that Act transferred to the High Court of Justice, might be heard and determined by Divisional Courts of the said High Court, whose determination of an appeal should be final, unless special leave to appeal from the same to the Court of Appeal should be given by the Divisional Court by which the appeal was heard. The first question is whether the Mayor's Court, which is not mentioned by name in this section, is included in the words "any other Inferior Court," &c.

of M. C. L.

That question has been the subject of a decision by the Court of Appeal in the case of Appleford v. Judkins (o), of which the following is a summary:—

This was an action of ejectment, in which the Judge of the Mayor's Court had directed a verdict for the plaintiff, but stayed execution and gave the defendant leave to move in the Superior Court under the 10th section of the Mayor's Court Act. The defendant moved, pursuant to the leave given, in the Common Pleas Division, which granted a rule to show cause why a nonsuit should not be entered. The rule, having been granted, was, in accordance with the practice under Order 58, R. 19, put into the list of Appeals from Inferior Courts, and, as such, came on before a Divisional Court sitting under section 45 of the Judicature Act, 1873, when, after cause shown, it was discharged with costs. Thereupon the plaintiff became entitled (p), on delivering an office copy of the order to the Registrar of the Mayor's Court, "to proceed in his action as if no such rule nisi had been obtained," and to have judgment entered for him in accordance with the verdict. No leave to appeal was applied for at the time on behalf of the defendant, but some days afterwards the "special leave" required by section 45 of the Judicature Act was applied for by way of motion, and was refused. The defendant, however, obtained an order to stay the proceedings in the Mayor's Court pending the prosecution of his appeal, assuming that the Court of Appeal had jurisdiction to entertain it.

Rule granted by C. P. D. was argued as an Inferior Court Appeal.

Rule discharged.

Leave to appeal asked for, but refused. Stay of proceedings in Mayor's Court.

When the appeal came on before Bramwell, Baggallay, and Thesiger, L.JJ., the preliminary objection—that, in the absence of "special leave," no appeal lay—was taken for the plaintiff, and, after argument, was sustained by the Court. The defendant's counsel contended that, although generically the Mayor's Court was an Inferior Court, it was not one of the "other Inferior Courts" referred to in the 45th section of the Judicature Act, 1873. By the 46th section of the Mayor's Court Act the Queen was empowered to direct by an Order in Council that the provisions of any Act passed to amend the law should extend and apply to the Mayor's Court, and by an Order in Council, dated Nov. 17, 1863, certain provisions contained in the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854 (of which section 34 was one), were so extended and applied. Under the 34th section, the defendant might, before the Judicature Acts, have had the decision of the Common Pleas reviewed in the Exchequer Chamber without "special leave." If that was so, and if by the Judicature Act the jurisdiction and powers of the Exchequer Chamber were transferred to the Court of Appeal, it followed that, under the same section, the defendant was entitled to appeal to the last mentioned Court from the order of the Common Pleas Division. The Court, however, did not follow the defendant's argument, but held (not without some apparent hesitation on the part of Baggallay, L.J.) that the appeal did not lie. The process of reasoning by which that conclusion was arrived at seems to have been the following:—In substance, though not in form, the application to the Common Pleas Division was an appeal. The Mayor's Court is undoubtedly an Inferior Court; the appeal therefore was an appeal from an Inferior Court. Was it one of the appeals from an Inferior Court which might, before the passing of the Judicature Act, have been brought to a Court whose jurisdiction was by that Act transferred to the High Court of Justice? Clearly it was, for, before that Act, it would have been brought to one of the three Superior Courts of Common Law at Westminster, whose jurisdiction was by that Act transferred to the High Court. That being so, it was an appeal which might be (and which in fact had been) heard and determined by a Divisional Court of the said High Court, sitting under section 45 of the Act. The "special leave" to appeal from their "determination" to the Court of Appeal which is required by that section not having been given, it followed that such determination was final, and the Court of Appeal had no jurisdiction to hear the appeal.

That case having authoritatively settled that the practice of the High Court as to appeals from Inferior Courts is to govern appeals from the Mayor's Court under section 10 of the M. C. L. P. Act, 1857, no more needs be said on the subject than that the practice is contained in the rules and orders made from time to time by the Supreme Court of Judicature. What was intended by the provision in section 15 of the Judicature Act, 1875, for the application of the enactments relating to appeals from County Courts to any other Inferior Court of record does not seem to have ever been explained. If an Order in Council was necessary before those "enactments" could apply to the Mayor's Court, it is clear that, as no such order in Council has been published, they do not, as yet, apply to this Court.

Courts (by which, as we have seen (q), is now to be understood one of the three Common Law Divisions of the High Court), and to agree that judgment shall be entered thereon (that is, upon the opinion of the Mayor's Court or of the Superior Court), for plaintiff or defendant as the Court may think fit (r). In case the parties consent and obtain an order to that effect from the Registrar, the latter is to transmit such special case, under the seal of the Court, to the Rule Department of the Master's office of the Court (Division), in which the case is to be argued. Thereupon all such proceedings are to be taken and rules and regulations observed in the Superior Court (Division) as are usual with reference to cases stated for the opinion of such Superior Court (Division) in actions therein pending. In other words, as soon as the case has left the hands of the Mayor's Court Registrar and has gone into the hands of the Common Law Division Master, the practice and procedure of the Division must be observed without any regard to the accident that the action is in the Mayor's Court. It is to be observed that these sections of the M. C. L. P. Act make no provision for the statement of a case without pleadings, but assume that the action must have gone as far as joinder of issue. Nor is the consent of the parties enough; having agreed inter se, they must obtain the order of the Court. Conversely the Mayor's Court has no power under this section, without the consent of both parties, to order a case to be stated either for the opinion of itself or for that of the High Court.

(q) Ante, p. 95.

(r) See 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 42, s. 25.

By the Order in Council of Nov. 17, 1863, the provisions of the C. L. P. Act, 1852, as to questions raised by consent without pleadings are extended and applied to the Mayor's Court. Their effect may be shortly stated as follows. The parties to an action (s) are enabled to dispense with pleadings altogether, and to raise disputed questions of fact, in the decision of which they have a bond fide interest (t), for the decision of a jury by means of an issue, and disputed questions of law for the opinion of a Court by means of a Special Case. Further, they are permitted to agree beforehand in writing as to the amount payable to the plaintiff (where he seeks to recover money), and as to the costs, and that judgment shall be entered and execution issued accordingly. Where no agreement is come to as to the costs, they are to follow the event.

As the practice and procedure of the Common Law Division to which a case is sent from the Mayor's Court are to be followed, it would seem that a Special Case stated under the 5th section must be argued before a single Judge, unless all parties agree that it shall be heard before a Divisional Court (u). When the case has been heard and determined, the successful party should obtain an office copy of the order of the Judge or of the Divisional Court, and produce the same to the Registrar, who thereupon enters judgment in conformity with such order.

M. C. L. P. Act, section 16. If a defendant in any action pending in the Mayor's Court, in which the claim does not exceed £50, wishes to remove such action into one of the Common Law Divisions of the High Court before judgment, he must proceed in one of two ways. He may apply by summons at Chambers to a Judge of the High Court for an order directing a writ of certiorari removing the action into one of the said Divisions of the High Court. The order (when made) is filed at the Writ Office on sealing the writ, and a copy thereof is left, together with the writ, at the Registrar's office, after which any step taken in the action in the Mayor's Court will be in contempt of the Court from which the writ was issued. The writ must be lodged "with the proper officer" of the Mayor's Court (x) within one month after service of the plaint, or, in any case, before the action is entered for trial according to the Mayor's Court practice. It is directed to the Lord Mayor and Aldermen as the judges before whom the Court is in law supposed to be held, and must be made returnable immediately (y). The practice is for the Registrar to give the plaintiff notice of the writ having been lodged, and to prepare the return thereto, which the defendant must apply for and file. In the absence of the order above referred to, the defendant must, before taking out the writ, be bound, with two sufficient

The defendant must give the plaintiff two days' notice of his intention to attend at the Registrar's office, at a time named (a), with his sureties. Should the plaintiff attend and object to the sufficiency of the proposed sureties, they must justify before the Registrar, and, if allowed, must, together with the defendant, enter into the necessary recognizance, which must in any case be enough to cover the plaintiff's claim and all reasonable costs. Should the plaintiff not attend at, or within half-an-hour of, the time mentioned in the notice, the Registrar will, on an affidavit of due service of notice, take the required recognizance, and make a return to the writ accordingly, which return is then filed.

After the writ is filed the defendant should enter an appearance in the Division of the High Court to which the action is removed, and, if he do not so appear, the plaintiff may compel him to do so by obtaining a conditional order for a procedendo unless the defendant appears within four days of the service thereof. Where one of several defendants in an action has obtained a certiorari, an appearance must be entered for them all, or a procedendo may be obtained. The provisions of the M. C. L. P. The proviso in the 90th section of the Act of 1873 only applies to such a case as has been contemplated in the earlier part of that section, a case, namely, in which the Mayor's Court, owing to its limited jurisdiction, is unable to do complete justice between the parties. In such case it shall be lawful for any Judge of the High Court, on the application of any party to the proceeding (h), to order a transfer of the whole proceeding to the High Court. Where the transfer is ordered, the Registrar transmits the record to the Master's office of the Division to which the "proceeding" is transferred, and the same is thenceforward continued and prosecuted in the High Court. It should be observed that the proceedings are to be continued in the High Court, and not re-commenced as in the case of removals by certiorari under the M. C. L. P. Act, so that

Removal of judgments, &c. 7. REMOVAL OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS FROM THE MAYOR'S COURT INTO THE HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE.

M. C. L. P. Act, 1857, s. 48. In dealing with the question of jurisdiction, the provisions of section 48 of the M. C. L. P. Act have been briefly given (k). That section provides for the removal into the High Court of a judgment obtained in, and of a rule or order made by, the Mayor's Court, by having the writ of execution on such judgment or such rule or order sealed by the proper officer of the High Court on a præcipe being lodged with him, together with an affidavit verifying the judgment or order and the fact that the same remains unreversed and unsatisfied. Immediately thereupon such writ and such judgment, rule, or order becomes and is of the same force, charge and effect, as if recovered in or made by the High Court. That, however, rests on the assumption that the judgment or order was obtained or made in a matter over which the Mayor's Court had jurisdiction. Where in fact it is obtained or made in a matter over which that Court has no jurisdiction, the High Court will not enforce it, but on the contrary will set it aside on application, and will prohibit the Mayor's Court from further proceeding to enforce it there. In support of this proposition it is enough to cite the authority of Bridge v.

(i) Gilbert's Law of Execution, p. 144. (k) Ante, pp. 60, 61.

Branch, a case which came before the Common Pleas ^{Branch} Division in May 1876, and which has been before ^{(May 1876).} referred to for another purpose (l). It was contended ^{Contention of plaintiff.} that defect of jurisdiction in the Inferior Court, and mere irregularity in the mode of obtaining a judgment in the Inferior Court, were practically the same thing so far as regarded the competence of the Superior Court to set it aside, the judgment being removed into the High Court merely for the purpose of being enforced. It was held by Lord Coleridge, C.J., and Brett and Archibald, J.J., that, if section 48 of the M. C. L. P. ^{Judgment of C. P. D.} Act, 1857, was to be construed in accordance with common sense and reason, the High Court was not precluded from dealing with a judgment improperly obtained in the Mayor's Court in the way in which it would deal with any other judgment obtained in the High Court. When it is shown that the judgment removed into the High Court for the purpose of being enforced is the result of a proceeding in a Court which has no jurisdiction over the subject-matter, that is a perfectly good ground for setting the judgment aside. It is otherwise ^{Where objection is to irregularity in M. C. proceedings, High Court has no jurisdiction to go behind judgment.} as to a mere irregularity. Where the only objection to the judgment being enforced in the High Court is that there was some irregularity in the proceedings in the Mayor's Court, the High Court has no jurisdiction to inquire into the merits or the regularity of those proceedings (m).

8. PROCEEDINGS IN INTERPLEADER.

1. For relief of persons generally under M. C. L. P. Act, 1857, section 32. Application by a defendant harassed by conflicting claims.

Summons to third party.

May be served outside the local jurisdiction.

Proceedings in action stayed. M. C. L. P. Act, s. 34.

Any defendant in any action in the Mayor's Court may apply, after declaration and before plea, by affidavit or otherwise, showing that he does not claim any interest in the subject-matter of the suit; but that the right thereto is claimed by, or supposed to belong to, a third party who has sued or is expected to sue for the same, and that the defendant does not in any manner collude with such third party, but is ready to bring into Court, pay, or dispose of the subject-matter of the action as the Court may order or direct (n). On such application the Registrar may issue a summons calling on such third party to appear in Court, and to state the nature and particulars of his claim, and to maintain or relinquish the same. Such summons may be served on such third party in any part of England or Wales (o). A copy thereof must be served on the plaintiff or his solicitor. On the hearing of the summons both the third party and the plaintiff will have a right to be heard, and in the meantime the proceedings in the action will be stayed (p). If the third party do not appear on the summons, being duly served therewith, or if, after appearing, he neglect or refuse to comply with any rule or order made by the Court, he and all persons claiming by from or under him may be declared to be for ever barred from prosecuting his claim against the defendant in the action or his representatives. In such case, when the third party's claim against the defendant is barred (his claim against the plaintiff being saved), the Court may make such order between plaintiff and defendant as to costs and other matters as may appear just and reasonable. Where the third party appears to maintain his claim, the Court, after hearing his allegations as well as those of the plaintiff, may make one of two orders. It may order him to make himself defendant in the same or some other action, or to proceed to trial on one or more issue or issues, directing which shall be plaintiff and which defendant. On the other hand, it may, with the consent of the plaintiff and the third party, summarily dispose of and determine the merits of their claims, and make such orders therein as to costs and all other matters as may appear to be just and reasonable. In whatever mode the question is decided—whether it be by judgment in an action or issue directed by the Court, or by an order made on the summons—the decision is to be final and conclusive against the parties and all persons claiming by from or under them. Such are the provisions of the M. C. L. P. Act, 1857, which, mutatis mutandis, are taken in terms from the Interpleader Act of 1831 (sections 1–3).

With these provisions were afterwards incorporated (by Order in Council) the provisions contained in sections 12–18 of the C. L. P. Act, 1860, the effect of which may be summarized as follows. Interpleader may be granted even where the titles of the claimants have not a

- common origin, but are adverse to and independent of one another. The Court is empowered summarily to dispose of the rival claims at the request of either party (instead of, as under the M. C. L. P. Act, by the consent of both parties), on the ground of the smallness of the amount in dispute. Where the facts are not in dispute and the question is one of law, the Judge has a discretion to decide the question in a summary manner without consent of either party, and, if he thinks it desirable, to order that a special case be stated for the opinion of the Court, the proceedings on which are governed by sections 46-48 of C. L. P. Act, 1852, and section 32 of the C. L. P. Act, 1854. All rules, orders, &c., in interpleader proceedings under the Act of 1860 may be entered of record and made evidence to secure the payment of costs directed by any such rule or order, and, when so entered, shall have the force and effect of a judgment in a Superior Court.

2. For relief of the Serjeant-at-Mace in execution of process against goods under M. C. L. P. Act, 1857, section 35. Registrar may issue summons.

The provisions of the M. C. L. P. Act, 1857, intended to protect the Serjeant-at-Mace in the execution of the process of the Mayor's Court, are borrowed, mutatis mutandis, from the 6th section of the Interpleader Act. The Registrar is empowered by section 35 to issue a summons calling before the Court both the party issuing such process and the party making a claim to or in respect of any goods or chattels taken or intended to be taken in execution, or to or in respect of the proceeds or value thereof. Thereupon any action brought in any Court of Record in respect of such claim shall be stayed, on pain of an order against the party bringing such action to pay the costs of all proceedings had on such claim.

action after the issue of such summons (q). The Mayor's Court is thereupon to exercise, for the adjustment of such claims and for the relief and protection of the Serjeant-at-Mace or his officers, the powers and authorities conferred by the previous sections, and to decide whatever may appear in the circumstances to be just, the costs of all such proceedings being in the discretion of the Court.

By the application to the Mayor's Court of the 13th section of the C. L. P. Act, 1860, an entirely new and very useful power was conferred on that Court. It provides that, when goods, &c., have been seized by the Serjeant-at-Mace under process of the Mayor's Court, and the title to such goods, &c., is claimed by a third person under a bill of sale or otherwise by way of security for a debt, the Court may order a sale of the whole or part thereof, and direct the application of the proceeds in such manner and on such terms as may seem just (r).

An interpleader issue is within the principle and therefore within the provisions of the 51st section of the C. L. P. Act, 1854, relating to the delivery, by one party in a cause, of interrogatories in writing for the examination of the opposite party (s). It has also been held that, under section 34 of the same Act, an appeal lay to the Exchequer Chamber to review a decision on

9. PROCEEDINGS ON JUDGMENT SUMMONSES.

The sections of the M. C. L. P. Act, 1857, relating to the procedure on judgment summonses for debts not exceeding £20 having been virtually repealed or rendered useless by the Debtors' Act, 1869, it is unnecessary to consider their provisions. By the Debtors' Act imprisonment for default in payment of a sum of money, save in certain excepted cases, is abolished. The only exceptions which it is necessary to consider here are the following:—

(1) Default by a trustee or person acting in a fiduciary capacity and ordered by a Court of Equity to pay a sum of money in his possession or under his control.

(2) Default by a solicitor in payment of costs ordered to be paid by him for misconduct as such, or in payment of money ordered to be paid by him in his character of an officer of the Court making the order.

(3) Default in payment of sums, in respect of the payment of which orders have been made which are in the said Act authorised to be made.

Section 5. In any case coming within one of the above exceptions, M. C. may direct pay- the Mayor's Court may direct that any debt due from any person in pursuance of any order or judgment of that or any other competent Court, shall be paid by instalments; and may from time to time rescind or vary such order (v); and may further commit to prison, for a term not exceeding six weeks (or until payment of the sum due), any person who makes default in payment of any debt, or instalment of any debt, due from him in pursuance of any order or judgment of the Mayor's Court or any other competent Court (x); provided that no person shall be imprisoned for a longer period than one year.

Before the jurisdiction of committing to prison given by the Debtors' Act can be exercised by the Mayor's Court, it must be proved to the satisfaction of the Court, that the person making default either has, or has had since the date of the judgment or order, the means of paying, and has refused or neglected, or refuses or neglects, to pay the sum in respect of which he has made default. Proof of the means of a person making default may be given in such manner as the Court thinks just, and, for the purposes of such proof, the debtor and any witnesses may be summoned and examined on oath according to the rules to be made with the approval of the Lord Chancellor by the Judge of the Mayor's Court (y).

The order of committal can be made only by the Judge or his Deputy, and must be made in open Court, and must show on its face the ground on which it is made.

Certificate of satisfaction of debt. The Rules by which the practice of the Mayor's Court since January, 1870, has been regulated in respect of the powers vested in that Court by the first part of the Debtors' Act, 1869, will be found in the Appendix; but Rules for regulation of practice in M. C. it is believed that the following notes of the practice as to judgment summonses will be found useful.

Practice of M. C. as to judgment and summonses. The list of summonses is called over at fifteen minutes after the time named for the return of a summons or for the adjournment of a case. If, on a case being called on, the debtor does not appear, it will be heard in his absence, and, if the creditor does not appear, it will be struck out.

The costs of any summons and hearing, and of the ^{Costs.} order of committal, are in the discretion of the Court, and must be applied for at the hearing of the case (b).

Before leaving this subject, it is necessary to call attention to the interpretation which was put by the Common Pleas Division upon the words "any order or judgment of that or any other competent Court" in the case of Washer v. Elliott, decided in January, 1876 (c). In December, 1874, final judgment for £36 was signed against the defendant in an action in the Court of Common Pleas on a bill of exchange accepted by him. Neither plaintiff nor defendant dwelt or carried on business within the jurisdiction of the Mayor's Court, but the cause of action appears to have in part arisen therein (d). In February, 1875, the defendant was ordered by a Judge of the Common Pleas to pay to the judgment creditor the amount of the judgment debt with interest at four per cent. by weekly instalments of £1. The defendant made default in payment of the fifth instalment, and thereupon a judgment summons was issued by the Mayor's Court at the request of the judgment creditor, on which summons (the defendant appearing by his solicitor under protest) the Mayor's Court Assistant Judge ordered the defendant to pay the amount by weekly instalments of £2, varying thereby the order of the Common Pleas Judge. The defendant then applied for and obtained a rule nisi for a Prohibition, which was eventually made absolute with costs. The judgment of Grove, Archibald and Lindley, JJ., starts from the assumption that on the facts it was clear that the original cause of action accrued, and that the defendant dwelt and carried on business, beyond the limits of the local jurisdiction. It is admitted that the Mayor's Court in some circumstances has power, under the Debtors' Act, to make orders for payment, and to commit not only in respect of judgments of other Inferior Courts (e), but also in respect of those of Superior Courts. By a "competent Court" is meant a Court acting within the local limits of its existing jurisdiction, and with reference to persons within those limits. It never could have been intended by the Legislature to enable an Inferior Court to rescind or vary the order of a Superior Court on a judgment of the latter. An order of committal would be beyond the competence of the Mayor's Court in this case. If so, all the preliminary steps leading up to that order ought to be prohibited. The object of the Statute was not to extend the local jurisdiction of Inferior Courts, but merely to render them auxiliary to the Superior Courts within their proper local limits. It was not necessary to decide (and the Common Pleas did not decide) the question whether, for the purpose of giving the Mayor's Court jurisdiction to make an order such as that complained of, the original cause of action must have arisen within the local limits. What it did decide was that the powers given by section 5 of the Debtors' Act cannot be exercised by the Mayor's Court over a debtor who, at the time he is summoned upon a judgment of the High Court, does not dwell or carry on business within the City. The proposition contended for by the defendant that the Act only intended to enable an Inferior Court to enforce the judgment of a Superior Court in cases where both Courts had concurrent jurisdiction over the subject matter, was not adopted by the Court. The debt must be due in pursuance of an order or judgment of a competent Court; in other words, of a Court which had jurisdiction to make it. The debt in this case was due in pursuance of a judgment of the High Court, not exceeding £50; the instalment of the debt was due under an order of one of the Judges of the High Court. Clearly, then, it was an instalment of a debt due in pursuance of an order of a competent Court, and, if the debtor had been amenable to the local jurisdiction of the Mayor's Court by dwelling or carrying on business in the City at the time the judgment summons was served on him, that Court might have had jurisdiction, as the handmaid of the High Court, to enforce that order, if necessary, by committal. But could it even in such case have rescinded or varied the order of the High Court? A study of the language of the section points to the conclusion that it could not. The only order that "any Court" may from time to time rescind or vary is "such order" as it may itself have made, directing the mode of payment of a debt due under an order or judgment of itself or some other competent Court. "Such order," when made by the High Court, can be rescinded or varied only by a Judge of that Court. If so, the order of the Mayor's Court Judge was clearly ultra vires, and a fortiori it was illegal, being made against a person who was in no way amenable to the local jurisdiction.

Local Court might have committed defendant if within local jurisdiction.

But could not in any case rescind or vary order of High Court.

M. C. may rescind or vary its own order.

Order of M. C. in Washer v. Elliott clearly ultra vires.

10. PROCEDURE UNDER BILLS OF EXCHANGE ACT, 1855. Bills of Exchange Act.

The Summary Procedure on Bills of Exchange Act, 18 & 19 1855 ("Keating's Act"), made it lawful for her Majesty Vict. c. 67, s. 9. by an Order in Council to direct that all or any part of The Queen enabled to apply Act to Courts of Record in England and Wales. the provisions of that Act should apply to all Courts of Record in England and Wales. The same power was conferred in regard to the Mayor's Court by the 46th M. C. L. P. Act, 1857, s. 46. section of the M. C. L. P. Act, 1857, as to the provisions By Order in Council provisions of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 67, extended to M. C. of any Act for the amendment of the law then passed or thereafter to be passed. In accordance with these enabling powers, by the Order in Council of Nov. 17, 1863, all the provisions of the Bills of Exchange Act (sections 8, 9, and 10 excepted), were extended and applied to the Mayor's Court. The only alterations necessary to be made are that "plaint" is to be read instead of "writ" or "writ of summons," that by "the Court" is to be understood "the Mayor's Court," by "a Judge," the Judge (or Registrar) of the Mayor's Court, and by a "Master," the Registrar of that Court. By Section 7 incorporates C. L. P. Acts, 1852 and 1854. the 7th section the applicable provisions of the C. L. P. Acts, 1852 and 1854, and all rules made under or by virtue of either of the said Acts, are incorporated with the Act. The practice and procedure, therefore, in actions brought in the Mayor's Court under this Statute are governed entirely by the same rules as the practice in ordinary actions in that Court, mutatis mutandis. Nothing needs to be added to the information to be found in the notes to the statute in Day's C. L. P. Acts (4th Ed.), and in the numerous books of practice under the Judicature Acts (f).

11. PROCEEDINGS IN EJECTMENT.

Proceedings in

It has been before stated that this Court has jurisdiction in actions of Ejectment (g). By the Order in Council of Nov. 17, 1863, all the provisions of the C. L. P. Act, 1852, with respect to actions of Ejectment contained in sections 168—221 (sections 202 & 217 alone excepted), so far as they are applicable to an action of ejectment between landlord and tenant, are extended and applied to the Mayor's Court, whose jurisdiction in such actions is thereby recognized. The practice and procedure, being governed by the C. L. P. Acts, are as nearly as possible identical with those in the Common Law Courts before the Judicature Acts. The only peculiarity to be noted is that, instead of the ordinary plaint in the Mayor's Court, the action is begun by a writ, a sealed copy of which must be served on the defendant or person named in the writ.

Order in Council, the 93rd section of the C. L. P. Act, C. L. P. Act, 1854; s. 93. 1854, was extended and applied to the Mayor's Court, under which section a new power is conferred on the Mayor's Court. Under the Act of 1852, the Court Effect of that section. could stay the proceedings in a second action of Ejectment until the costs of the former had been paid, but could not compel the claimant to give security for the payment of the defendant's costs in the second action. This power it acquired by the above section of the Act of 1854. By the same Order in Council were also C. L. P. Act, 1860 ss. 1—3. applied to the Mayor's Court the provisions contained in the first three sections of the C. L. P. Act, 1860, as to relief against forfeiture for non-payment of rent and for non-insuring.

12. DISCONTINUANCE AND STAY OF PROCEEDINGS.

A plaintiff may discontinue his action at any time. Withdrawal of action before service of plaintiff. This is done, where service of the plaint has not been effected, by filing a withdrawal of the action. Where the plaint has been served but the defendant has not appeared, the plaintiff may file a withdrawal or obtain a rule to discontinue. After service and before appearance. In either case, if notice of withdrawal or copy rule to discontinue be served on the defendant before he appears, the plaintiff will have no costs to pay. No costs where defendant has notice of discontinuance before appearance. Once the defendant has appeared, the plaintiff can only obtain the rule (i) on payment of

(i) Which is applied for ex parte by filing a præcipe with the Registrar.

After appearance, costs. costs, which, if a Declaration has not been delivered, are marked on the rule and are payable on the day after taxation. The defendant may, if the terms of the rule permit, make up a record and sign judgment for costs taxed, and costs of making up record and judgment. Thereupon execution may issue forthwith.

Consent rule to stay action on terms. Where the plaintiff is willing to take his debt by instalments, and has agreed with the defendant as to the terms, he should draw up a consent rule to that effect. Where the defendant has appeared, all that is required will be his consent as to the time of payment, and the terms in case of default. Upon that being filed with the Registrar, a rule will be granted to stay the action on the terms of the consent, which may include the agreed amount of costs or the agreed terms as to taxation of costs. Should the defendant make default in payment, the plaintiff, if judgment has been signed, issues execution. If judgment has not been signed, the plaintiff signs judgment for "default under rule," and must annex the original rule to the judgment docket at the time of entry (k).

13. PRACTICE AS TO REFERENCE TO ARBITRATION.

or the production of any document or documents, a note giving the title of the action, the name of the witness, or the document required, is filed with the Registrar, and thereupon an order is made accordingly, disobedience to which is a contempt of Court.

The power of the Court to refer an action without consent of both parties, but on the application of either, at any time after the action is commenced, is derived under the C. L. P. Act, 1854 (sections 3—18), applied to the Mayor's Court by the Order in Council of Nov. 17, 1863, and the practice of the Mayor's Court in regard to references under those sections may be taken to be the same as that of the Superior Courts before the Judicature Acts.

And all such amendments as may be necessary for the purpose of determining in the existing suit the real question in controversy between the parties shall be so made (l). amendments. The 36th section of the C. L. P. Act, 1860 (also applied to the Mayor's Court by the same Order) is simply a re-enactment in terms of the section last quoted, but is limited in its application to proceedings under the provisions of the Act of 1860.

Practice
in M. C. as to granting leave to amend.

With regard to the mode in which the Mayor's Court exercises the very large powers of amendment with which it has been armed by statute, it is enough to say that leave to amend, where amendment is necessary for the purpose of determining the real question in controversy between the parties, is never refused, and that terms are imposed only where to grant leave unconditionally would operate to the prejudice of the opposite party.

(m) See the notes to that section in Day's C. L. P. Acts, 4th ed., pp. 216—219.

15. PRACTICE AS TO MOTIONS, RULES, AND ORDERS.

Practice as to motions, &c.

As has been already stated (n), the Registrar or his Deputy sits daily as a Court for the transaction of all the business of the Court, except the trial of issues.

A Court sits daily.

All interlocutory applications should be made to him in the first instance. When, however, the Judge is sitting, any application which is properly made to a Judge should be made directly to him, and must, unless he is sitting at chambers, be made by Counsel by way of motion. Where an application is made to the Judge in the first instance which might have been made to the Registrar, no costs of the application will be allowed, except in special circumstances.

Interlocutory applications made to Registrar.

Applications to Judge in Court must be by counsel.

Costs of application to Judge.

When not allowable.

All applications (not ex parte) must be on written notice to the opposite party, which notice should be served or delivered by post before 6 P.M., in the case of an application to be heard on the following day. The notice should set out the order applied for. The hours for hearing applications are from noon to two, and fifteen minutes' grace is allowed. Where good ground for doing so is shown, the Court will allow a notice to be made returnable at 10 A.M., and in such case the notice should show on its face that it is so made by leave of the Court. Applications for rules to show cause in arrest of judgment, or for judgment non obstante veredicto, or for a repleader, or for granting new trials, and for entering nonsuits and verdicts in causes pending

Orders of the Court itself, when to be drawn up. It must not be forgotten that any interlocutory order, such as the orders made at Judges' Chambers by the Judges of the High Court of Justice, is, in the Mayor's Court, an order of the Court itself, and must, therefore, be drawn up not later than the day following that on which it is made.

Affidavits in M. C.

16. AFFIDAVITS IN THE MAYOR'S COURT.

Before whom they may be sworn.

An affidavit to be used in the Mayor's Court may be sworn in the City before the Lord Mayor, any Alderman, the Recorder of the City, the Registrar or Deputy Registrar of the Court, or in any part of the United Kingdom before any magistrate or commissioner authorised to administer oaths in the Supreme Court.

Signature of person before whom affidavit is sworn.

If the person before whom it is made have a seal of office, that seal should be affixed to the jurat. If not, his signature must be verified in the Mayor's Court by affidavit, stating that the person before whom the affidavit purports to be sworn is authorised to administer

Compare Lebeau v. General Steam Navigation Company (Jan. 1873), L. R. 8 C. P. 129; 42 L. J. C. P. 76; 21 W. R. 358; where an attempt was made in the oaths; that the signature to the jurat is the signature of the person there named, or is so, to the best of the information and belief of the deponent, who is acquainted with his handwriting and signature.

In all other respects it may be safely assumed that the rules of the Mayor's Court as to affidavits to be used in that Court are, as nearly as possible, the same as the rules in the Common Law Courts before the Judicature Acts (p). Documents which may be required to be produced in any foreign country, or elsewhere out of the jurisdiction of the Court, may be authenticated by oath administered or declaration taken by the Judge of the Mayor's Court in or out of Court.

Infancy.

Where the plaintiff is an infant, an application should be made ex parte by, or on behalf of, the infant to the Court for an order for liberty to sue by his prochein amy (or next friend). The application should be intitled in the Mayor's Court, London. It must be made before the action is entered, and a copy of the order must be served with the plaint. It must be signed by the infant (if he or she can write), and the signature must be attested. Appended thereto must be the written and signed consent of the next friend to the order asked for. T. 1853 ("An application to compel the plaintiff to give security for costs must, in ordinary cases, be made before issue joined"), and to the numerous cases therein cited and commented upon (q).

What "residence out of jurisdiction" means as to M. C. It should not be forgotten that permanent residence out of the jurisdiction (which, in the case of a plaintiff, is prima facie ground for an application for security for costs) must be taken, in the case of a plaintiff suing in the Mayor's Court, to mean out of the United Kingdom, and not merely out of the local jurisdiction of the City Court (r). The amount of the security in each case is entirely in the discretion of the Registrar, and varies with the requirements of the case. It may be given in any of the three different ways—by payment into Court of the sum required by the Registrar; by the undertaking of the plaintiff's solicitor; by bond. If the proposed security is by bond, two days' notice must be given to the opposite party of the person or persons proposed as surety or sureties, and on the expiration of the two days' notice—no objection having been made—the bond is entered into. Where any objection is taken to the proposed sureties, an appointment is given by the Registrar, who determines the question as to their sufficiency either upon affidavit or by examination of the sureties. As to the security for costs in Ejectment actions, see ante, p. 123.

If in any action in covenant, debt, detinue, or assumpsit (not being an action for breach of promise of marriage), the plaintiff shall recover a sum not exceeding five pounds, or if in any action in trespass, trover, or case (not being an action for malicious prosecution, or libel, or slander, or seduction), the plaintiff shall recover a sum not exceeding forty shillings, the plaintiff shall have judgment to recover such sum only and no costs, unless the Judge before whom such verdict shall be obtained shall certify on the back of the record that it appeared to him that there was a sufficient reason for bringing the said action in the Mayor's Court, and in Effect of section stated.

(1) Where there is a trial and verdict.

No certificate, no costs.

Put shortly, the effect of the above enactment is that in the Mayor's Court the recovery of £5 in contract and of £2 in tort does not carry costs. Where the action is tried in open Court (not necessarily by a jury), and results in a verdict for no more than £5 in contract, or no more than £2 in tort, the plaintiff will not be entitled to any costs at all, unless the Judge who tried the cause certifies on the back of the record that it appeared (not "appears") to him at the trial that there was a sufficient reason for bringing the action in the Mayor's Court instead of in the County Court. In the absence of such certificate, the plaintiff has no means whatever of recovering judgment for anything more than the bare amount of the verdict.

Where there is no verdict, and where, consequently, it is impossible for the plaintiff who "recovers" no more than £5 in contract or £2 in tort to obtain a certificate on the back of the record from "the Judge before whom such verdict was obtained," a different mode of recovering his costs of suit is prescribed. In that case he must satisfy the Registrar of the existence of the "sufficient reason" which would, if the amount

(2) Where amount is recovered otherwise than by

had been recovered by verdict, have entitled him to a certificate for costs from the Judge. The application for that purpose is not ex parte but "on summons," and the plaintiff must give the defendant a day's notice to show cause why the plaintiff should not be at liberty to recover his costs, and should not have judgment to recover such costs accordingly. If the "sufficient reason" be not made apparent to the satisfaction of the Registrar, the plaintiff will get no order.

The 34th section of the C. L. P. Act, 1860, was by Order in Council extended and applied to the Mayor's Court, but as that section was wholly repealed by the County Courts Act, 1867, it needs not to be considered here. It is enough to point out that it deprived a plaintiff who recovered less than £5 by the verdict of a jury in an action of tort, of all costs in respect of such verdict, if the Judge, &c., certified (inter alia) that the action was not fit to be brought, thus extending the operation of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 24, s. 2.

By the 29th section of the County Courts Act, 1867, in any action or suit brought in the Mayor's Court which could have been brought in a County Court, if the plaintiff recover a verdict for less than £10, he shall not recover from the defendant a greater amount of costs than he would be allowed if the action or suit had been brought in a County Court, unless the Judge shall certify that the action or suit was a fit one to be brought in the Mayor's Court. This enactment, be it observed, applies to all actions and suits whether in contract or tort, and whether on the Common Law or the Equity side of the Court, unnecessarily brought and tried in the Mayor's Court. If the action or suit be one which the County Court has no jurisdiction to entertain, it is not within this section. If, on the other hand, it be one which could have been brought in a County Court, it is for the plaintiff to justify his having brought it in the Mayor's Court, where the scale of costs is higher than in the County Court. If he recover a verdict for £10, that is a sufficient justification. If the verdict be for less than £10, he will be treated in the matter of costs as if he had sued in the County Court, unless the Judge certify that it was a fit action or suit to be brought in the Mayor's Court. Provided he obtains that certificate, he will be allowed costs on the Mayor's Court scale, but not otherwise. The certificate need not be "on the record," and may be given at any time before the costs are taxed. If the Judge refuse to certify, no application can be made to the Registrar to allow them, and there is no appeal from the exercise of the Judge's discretion.

Practice as to costs in petty cases.

In practice, the recovery of less than £5 in an action of contract is generally held by the Judge to be conclusive evidence that the action ought not to have been brought in the Mayor's Court, and it would require very special circumstances indeed to induce him even to listen to an application for costs. A verdict for anything over five (but under ten) pounds in contract entitles a plaintiff to costs on the County Court scale, and to have his application for a certificate for costs on the higher scale entertained, but it will not be granted unless he can show that there was a sufficient reason for occupying the time of a Judge, two counsel, and twelve jurymen in deciding a case which might have been decided in the City of London Court. The Mayor's Court may be—and is—an Inferior Court of Record; but its machinery is not adapted for infinitesimal litigation, and those who want to have their petty claims settled in a City Court of Justice should resort to the City Court for the recovery of small debts.

Summary of Procedure and Practice.

It may be accepted as a safe principle on which to act generally in proceedings in an action in the Mayor's Court, that all rules of law enacted and declared by Statute as binding on the High Court of Justice are recognised and are given effect to by the Mayor's Court. With regard to the rules of law enacted and declared by the Judicature Act, as has been already noticed (t), it is expressly provided that they are to be in force in all Courts whatsoever in England, so far as the matters to which they relate are respectively cognisable by those Courts (u).

Term, 1853), and, therefore, have no operation (as have the said Pleading Rules) to alter any statutory provision whatever. Nothing contained in those Rules is binding on the Mayor's Court, but it is scarcely an exaggeration to say that, mutatis mutandis, all the information that is needed as to the unwritten rules of practice in the Mayor's Court may be gathered from the written rules of practice consolidated by the learned Judges who framed the Rules of Hilary Term, 1853. PART III.

THE MODE OF PLEADING IN AN ORDINARY ACTION IN THE MAYOR'S COURT. Mode of pleading in M. C.

THE Mayor's Court Procedure Act, 1857, was passed with the object (inter alia) of amending "the mode of pleading" in the Mayor's Court (a). The only sections which deal expressly with the mode of pleading are the 12th and 15th, which have been already discussed in Part I. on the jurisdiction of this Court (b). One (s. 15) abolishes, so far as the defendant is concerned, all proceedings whatsoever by means of which, until the passing of the Act, an objection to the jurisdiction might have been raised, except a plea to the jurisdiction (c). The other (s. 12) takes away expressly the right of a defendant, sued under the conditions therein specified, to avail himself in the Mayor's Court of the only mode of objecting to the jurisdiction that is not abolished by the Statute (d).

The mode of pleading was further amended in November, 1863, by the partial extension and application to the Mayor's Court of the enactments of the C. L. P. Act, 1852 Parts of C. L. P. Act, 1852

(a) See title of the Act, and compare Preamble.

(b) See ante, pp. 7-42.

extended and applied to M. C. Act, 1852, an Act passed with the object (inter alia) of rendering the mode of pleading in the Superior Courts "more simple and speedy" (e).

Sections 49—57. The sections which deal with "the language and form of pleadings in general" are sections 49—57, as to which but little needs here be said. Special demurrers are abolished, but any pleading may be demurred to as not setting forth sufficient ground of action, defence, or reply, and judgment on such demurrer is to be given according to the very right of the cause and matter in law. Fictitious and needless averments shall be omitted, and, if inserted with the effect of embarrassing the other party, may be struck out under the section which empowers the Court or a Judge to strike out or amend any pleading so framed as to prejudice, embarrass, or delay the fair trial of the action. For Rules to declare, reply, or rejoin is substituted a four days' notice to the opposite party. All pleadings are, in the absence of a special order to the contrary, to be dated and entered as of the actual day of pleading. Profert and oyer are abolished, and, where a document is referred to in any pleading, the party pleading in answer thereto may set out the whole or the material part of such document as part of his pleading. The performance of conditions precedent may be averred generally by either party, but shall not be denied generally; the party intending to contest the performance of any condition or conditions must specify it or them in his pleading.

THE DECLARATION.—The only sections relating to ^{The Decla-} the mode of declaring which have been applied to the ^{ration.} Mayor's Court are sections 60 and 61, the first of which ^{Sections} gives the form for commencing a Declaration after plea ^{60, 61.} of non-joinder, while the other makes a Declaration for libel or slander sufficient if the words set forth disclose a cause of action, with or without the innuendo. The ^{Section 59} 59th section, prescribing the form of commencement ^{does not} and conclusion of every Declaration, was not extended ^{apply to} to this Court, probably because it could not have been ^{M. This may be regarded as a general indebitatus as- ^{Count sur} sumpsit count, embracing all debts and liquidated ^{concessit} money demands, including bills of exchange (h) and ^{solvere.} promissory notes. In it the plaintiff, after demanding ^{Form of} £—— of him, alleges that the defendant on some day ^{count.} (any day before action entered will do) in the —— year of the reign of Her present Majesty, &c., at the parish of St. Helen, London, and within the jurisdiction of this Court (i) for and in consideration of divers sums of

Pleas, &c. PLEAS AND SUBSEQUENT PLEADINGS.—The sections C. L. P. Act, 1852; of the Act applied to this Court are ss. 64-71, 74-80, sections applied to 87-89. Express colour, special traverses, prayer of M. C. judgment, and formal commencements and conclusions Sections 64-67. of pleas are abolished. Pleas are to begin with a simple statement of what the defendant says, and to state Section 68. whether he says it by his solicitor or in person. Any defence arising after action is to be pleaded according to Section 69. the fact. The plea puis darrein continuance is to be Section 70. allowed only subject to restrictions (k). It is lawful for the defendant in all actions (save such as are therein expressly excepted) to pay into Court a sum of money by way of compensation or amends, and such payment, Section 71. when made, is to be pleaded in all cases as nearly as may be in the form prescribed, mutatis mutandis. Sections 72 and 73 do not apply to this Court. To Section 74. preclude doubts as to the form of Pleas, it is enacted that no plea that is good in substance is to be objected to on the ground that it treats the Declaration either as framed for a breach of contract or for a wrong (breach of duty).

Pleas of payment and set-off, and all other pleadings Section 75. (including Declarations) capable of being construed distributively, are to be so construed.

A defendant may traverse generally such facts as Section 76. might have been denied by one plea, or traverse separately any material allegation in the Declaration; while Section 77. plaintiff may traverse by a general denial the whole of the defendant's pleading, or may admit part and traverse the rest,—a liberty which section 78 extends to Section 78. defendants. Either party may deny the substance of Section 79. his opponent's pleading by joining issue thereon. Either Section 80. party, by leave of the Court, may plead and demur to the same pleading at the same time on an affidavit (if required), and the Court, if, in the exercise of its discretion, it grant the leave applied for, will direct which issue shall be first disposed of. Sections 81—86 were not extended to this Court. Only one new assignment Section 87. may be pleaded to any number of pleas to the same cause of action. No plea is to be repeated without leave, which is to be granted only on proof that the Section 88. repetition is essential to a trial on the merits. The Section 89. 89th section prescribes the form of demurrer and joinder in demurrer, and provides that any demurrer delivered without a marginal statement of some substantial matter of law intended to be argued may be set aside by the Court.

Plea to the Jurisdiction.—As has been already pointed out, an objection taken in this Court to the jurisdiction must be taken "by plea," if at all. It has been sometimes doubted whether the "plea" referred to in section 15 of the M. C. L. P. Act is a dilatory plea, admitting the general jurisdiction of the Court but exempting the defendant upon special grounds, or a plea in bar of the action, on the ground that the jurisdiction of the Court is limited to a class within which the particular claim does not fall. That doubt was finally resolved by Willes, J., in advising the House of Lords in the Mayor, &c., of London v. Cox (l), by showing that in an Inferior Court an objection to jurisdiction in the form of a dilatory plea is always unnecessary and out of place, as indeed it would be even in a Superior Court when the objection is that the limits of local jurisdiction are transgressed. Since the decision in Hawes v. Paveley there is no reason why any defendant who takes exception to the exercise of jurisdiction over him by the Mayor's Court should raise his objection in that Court, when there is a far more speedy and certain method of staying the proceedings by means of a prohibition. As, however, the defendant may, if he so please, raise the objection (except under certain conditions) by means of a special plea, it is necessary that he should be made aware of the conditions under which that plea must in this Court be pleaded. First, then, it must be pleaded in person, and not by solicitor (m). Secondly, it must—though not a dilatory plea—be verified by affidavit, in which the defendant swears that the allegations contained in the plea with which it is delivered are "true in substance and in fact" (n). Thirdly, it must be pleaded within four days from the delivery of the Declaration (o). Fourthly, it cannot be joined with any other plea, as a defendant will not be allowed to admit and deny the jurisdiction in the same pleading. He cannot, therefore, pay money into Court in satisfaction of so much of the claim as he admits to be due and to be within the jurisdiction, and, as to the rest of the causes of action, plead to the jurisdiction.

The form of the plea necessarily varies with the amount claimed in the action. If the amount exceed £50, the case cannot be within the terms of section 12; whereas, if it do not exceed £50, it may be within that section. Where the claim exceeds £50, the plea must allege that the said supposed causes of action, and each and every of them, accrued to the plaintiff out of the jurisdiction, &c., and not in the parish of St. Helen, London, or elsewhere within the jurisdiction; and these allegations he must state that he is ready to verify on oath.

claimed, there being no other plea on the record. If, on the other hand, the defendant should succeed in proving that the Mayor's Court has no jurisdiction to entertain any part, however insignificant, of the plaintiff's claim, he must be content to prove it at his own expense, and will get no order for costs against the plaintiff from a Court which, by his own showing, is incompetent to award him any. If there is no evidence to go to the jury in support of the claim to the jurisdiction, the defendant may ask for a nonsuit, and, in the alternative, for leave to move under section 10 of the M. C. L. P. Act, as was done by the defendant in the case of Sewell v. Cheetham (q).

If defendant succeeds, he gets no costs.

Sewell v. Cheetham,
(May, 1874.)

Facts.

In that case the plaintiff declared in concessit solvere as indorsee of a bill of exchange against the defendant as acceptor, and the defendant pleaded to the jurisdiction. At the trial the bill (which purported to be drawn at Stockport) was produced and put in evidence, and a witness was called to prove that he knew Smith, Payne and Smiths (where the bill was made payable) to be bankers in the City of London. No evidence was offered of the drawing, acceptance, indorsement, presentment, or dishonour of the bill, it being assumed (rightly) that the only matter of fact put in issue by the plea was whether any part of the cause of action accrued within the parish of St. Helen, London, or elsewhere within the jurisdiction, and (wrongly) that the evidence called for the plaintiff decided that issue in his favour. A verdict was entered for the plaintiff, the defendant having leave to move to enter a nonsuit. On the argument of the rule nisi, granted by the Court of Common Pleas, it was contended for the plaintiff that the drawing, acceptance, indorsement, and dishonour were all admitted by the plea, and that the bill itself proved dishonour in the City.

The Court, however (Lord Coleridge, C.J., Brett and Denman, JJ.), while conceding that the plea admitted presentment and dishonour of the bill somewhere, held that there was no evidence of its having been presented and dishonoured at the bank where it was made payable, and none, consequently, that any part of the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction. According to Brett, J., the plaintiff had not made out even a prima facie case. The rule to enter a nonsuit was accordingly made absolute. If the bill had been accepted especially payable at the head office of Smith, Payne and Smith's bank in the City, the plaintiff would only have had to put in the bill and call a witness to prove that the bank was in the City. That evidence, coupled with the admission of the defendant by his plea that he was the acceptor, and that the bill had been duly presented and dishonoured, would have entitled the plaintiff to a verdict. But, if the bill had been made especially payable in the City, the defendant would hardly have been advised to plead to the jurisdiction.

THE PLEA OF NEVER INDEBTED.—This plea is made by the only Regula Generalis ever issued by the Mayor's Court since the Act of 1857, the stereotyped defence to every action in which the plaintiff declares in concessit solvere. The rule runs as follows: The plea "never was indebted" shall be used in the Mayor's Court to the

What defences must be pleaded specially. Mode of pleading counter-claims in M. C. PLEADING COUNTERCLAIMS SINCE THE JUDICATURE ACT.—It has been already pointed out (t) that, under the provisions of the Judicature Acts, the Mayor's Court has jurisdiction to try a counterclaim set up by a defendant involving matters altogether outside the local boundaries, so far as such counterclaim affords a defence

Not provided for by Judicature Acts or Rules. to the plaintiff's claim. No provision, however, was made in the Judicature Acts for the mode of pleading a counterclaim in the Mayor's Court, and as the pleading rules adopted under those Acts in the High Court of (r) This rule is taken verbatim from the third of the examples given in Rule 6 of the Pleading Rules, Trin. T., 1853. Day (4th ed.).

(s) Here the Mayor's Court has necessarily departed from the Common Law pleading rules, which make both non assumpsit and "never indebted" inadmissible pleas in actions on bills or notes (Rule 7). By Rule 8 all matters of confession and avoidance in all actions on contract are to be specially pleaded.

(t) Ante, pp. 65—69.

Justice have not been ordered to apply to this Court, considerable doubt has been felt as to the proper mode of pleading in reference to counterclaims. It is submitted, however, that there ought to be no doubt on the subject. The Mayor's Court is both competent and bound to entertain any claim, whether in debt or damages, whether within or without its jurisdiction, when set up by way of defence to an action in that Court. But the mode in which such claim is pleaded is a matter over which the Mayor's Court has a primary control, and, in the absence of any regulation to the contrary, it must be assumed that a claim set up by a defendant is to be pleaded as nearly as may be in the same form as would be used if the like claim were set up by the plaintiff. The counterclaim should in form be like any other numbered plea, and should commence thus: "And, by way of counterclaim, the defendant says that, &c." (u); and should conclude with a claim for £—(if the amount be liquidated) or for damages, &c. (if the amount be unliquidated), or (where necessary) for such other and further relief as the nature of the case may require.

Particulars of counterclaim should, of course, be given with the pleas, just as, under the practice before the introduction of counterclaims, the defendant had with his pleas to supply particulars of set-off (x), and the plaintiff to supply particulars of demand with or after Declaration.

In pleading to a counterclaim, the plaintiff should treat it as one of the pleas and not as a statement of

should be pleaded to. claim. In other words, he should not divide his Replication into two separate pleadings, consisting of a joinder of issue on the pleas proper and a defence to the cross claim, but should state, in a separate numbered paragraph and in the same form that he would use in pleading to a Declaration, his answer to the counter-claim. Upon that the defendant should join issue simply.

Summary as to practice of M. C. in matters of pleading. To sum up the practice of this Court in matters of pleading, it may be said that it is still governed absolutely by such of the provisions as to pleading contained in the C. L. P. Acts as were expressly extended and applied to this Court by Order in Council; that, further, it is virtually governed by the Pleading Rules of Trinity Term, 1853, made by the Judges in pursuance of the C. L. P. Act, 1852, wherever those rules are not inconsistent with the customary mode of pleading in concessit solvere, and with the solitary Pleading Rule above referred to as having been framed by this Court under the powers conferred by the M. C. L. P. Act. The rules which govern the reformed system of pleading introduced into the Superior Courts in 1875 do not govern (as yet) the unreformed system of pleading in this Court.

THE MAYOR'S COURT OF LONDON PROCEDURE ACT, 1857.

20 & 21 VICT. CAP. CLVII.

An Act for abolishing certain Jurisdiction of the Sheriffs Courts of the City of London, and for amending the Process, Practice, and Mode of Pleading in the Mayor's Court, and for extending the Jurisdiction thereof.

[17th August, 1857.]

WHEREAS there exist in the City of London certain Courts of Law called respectively the Sheriffs Court of the Poultry Compter, and the Sheriffs Court of the Giltspur Street Compter: And whereas it is expedient that certain functions and jurisdiction of the said Sheriffs Courts should be abolished: And whereas it is expedient to make the Mayor's Court more efficient, by extending its powers and simplifying its practice and mode of procedure: May it therefore please your Majesty that it may be enacted; and be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows; (that is to say,)

1. This Act shall commence and come into operation on the first day of October one thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven. Commencement of Act.

Short
title.

2. In citing this Act in other Acts of Parliament and in legal instruments and other proceedings it shall be sufficient to use the expression "The Mayor's Court of London Procedure Act, 1857."

No action or suit to be brought in Sheriffs Court, except in certain cases.

3. From and after the commencement of this Act no action or suit for the recovery of any debt or demand shall be commenced in the Sheriffs Court either of the Poultry Compter or of the Giltspur Street Compter, save only and except pleas of personal actions under the provisions of the London (City) Small Debts Act, 1852, which may continue to be brought as heretofore in the Sheriffs Court without being entitled as of either Compter: Provided always, that nothing in this Act contained shall be deemed or construed to take away or diminish the power or authority of the sheriffs of London or either of them to execute any writ of inquiry or other writ or mandate which may be directed to them by any Court of competent authority, or by any Judge or officer thereof, or by any person lawfully authorised to issue the same, or any writ of trial which may be directed to them or either of them under or by virtue of the provisions of the Act of Third and Fourth William the Fourth, chapter forty-two, nor to take away or diminish any other power or authority which the sheriffs of London or either of them can have or hath or can or may lawfully exercise by Act of Parliament, charter, act of Common Council, custom, prescription, or otherwise howsoever.

Court of Error.

4. And whereas it is expedient to facilitate the proceedings in error on matters arising in the Mayor's Court: Therefore, from and after the commencement of this Act, no petition shall be presented to or be received by the Lord High Chancellor for any writ of error to review any proceeding in the Mayor's Court, nor shall any writ of error be issued thereout to review any such proceeding, nor shall any writ or other proceeding be issued to the Court of Saint Martin's-le-Grand for any purpose as a court of error to review any proceeding of the Mayor's Court, but in all cases of error arising on proceedings in the Mayor's Court the Exchequer Chamber shall be the Court of Error for the purposes of this Act, and all matters in error shall be proceeded with according to the rules to be framed for that purpose as is hereinafter expressed (p. 89).

5. The parties in any action or foreign attachment may, after issue joined, by consent, and by the order of the Court, state the facts of the case in the form of a special case for the opinion of the Court, or of any one of the Superior Courts, and may agree that judgment shall be entered thereon for the plaintiff, garnishee, or defendant, as the Court or such Superior Court may think fit (p. 101).

6. When the opinion of such Superior Court shall be required the Registrar of the Mayor's Court shall transmit such special case, under the seal of the Court, to the Rule Department of the Master's Office of the Superior Court in which the case is to be argued, and thereupon all such proceedings shall be taken and rules and regulations observed in the said Superior Court as are usual with reference to cases stated for the opinion of such Superior Court in actions therein pending (p. 102).

7. The Registrar of the Court, upon the production of an office copy of the rule of the Superior Court made upon hearing the said special case, shall enter judgment in the Court in conformity with the decision of the Superior Court (p. 103).

8. If either party appearing on the trial of any cause in which the sum sought to be recovered shall exceed the sum of twenty pounds shall be dissatisfied with the determination or direction of the Court in point of law, or upon the admission or rejection of any evidence, such party may appeal from the same to any one of the Superior Courts (two or more of the puisne judges or barons thereof shall sit out of term as a Court of Appeal for that purpose); provided, that such party shall, within two days after such determination or direction, give notice of appeal to the other party or his attorney, and also give security within such time or times as the Court shall direct, to be approved of by the Registrar of the Court (if the Judge shall so direct), for the costs of the appeal, whatever be the event of the appeal, and for the amount of the judgment, if he be the defendant and the appeal be dismissed: Provided nevertheless, that such security, so far as regards of case.

9. Such appeal shall be in the form of a case agreed on by both parties or their attorneys, and, if they cannot agree, the Judge of the Court, upon being applied to by them or their attorneys, shall settle the case and sign it, and such case shall be transmitted by the Registrar to the Rule Department of the Master's Office of the Court in which the appeal is to be brought (p. 93).

10. If upon the trial of any issue the Judge shall grant leave to the plaintiff or defendant to move in any of the Superior Courts to set aside a verdict or a nonsuit, and to enter a verdict for the plaintiff or defendant, or to enter a nonsuit, as the case may be, or for a new trial, the party to whom such leave may have been given may apply by motion to such Superior Court, within such period of time after the trial as motions of the like kind shall from time to time be permitted to be made in such Superior Court, for a rule to show cause why such verdict or nonsuit should not be set aside, and a verdict entered for the plaintiff or defendant, or a nonsuit entered, or why a new trial should not be had, as the case may be, in such action, which Court is hereby authorised and empowered to grant or refuse such rule (which rule, when granted, shall operate as a stay of proceedings until the determination thereof), and afterwards to proceed to hear and determine the merits thereof, and to make such orders thereupon, and as to costs, as the same Court shall think proper ; and in case such Court shall order a new trial to be had in any such action, the party obtaining such order shall deliver the same or any office copy thereof to the Registrar of the said Court, and thereupon all the proceedings on the former verdict or nonsuit shall cease, and the action shall proceed to trial, according to the practice of the Court, in like manner as if no trial had been had therein; or in case the Court before whom such rule shall be heard shall order the same to be discharged, the party obtaining any such order may, upon delivering the same or an office copy thereof to the Registrar, be at liberty to proceed in any such action as if no such rule nisi had been obtained; and if a verdict be ordered to be entered for the plaintiff or defendant, or a nonsuit be ordered to be entered, as the case may be, judgment shall be entered accordingly (pp. 93—96, 97, 99).

11. If in any action in covenant, debt, detinue, or assumpsit, Plaintiff not being an action for breach of promise of marriage, the recovering plaintiff shall recover a sum not exceeding five pounds, or if ^{not exceed-}ing £5 in any action in trespass, trover, or case, not being an action ^{of} for malicious prosecution, or for libel, or for slander, or for ^{contract} criminal conversation, or for seduction, the plaintiff shall ^{and 40s.} in action recover a sum not exceeding forty shillings, the plaintiff shall ^{for a} have judgment to recover such sum only, and no costs, unless ^{wrong, to} the Judge before whom such verdict shall be obtained shall ^{have no} certify on the back of the record that it appeared to him that ^{costs, un-} there was a sufficient reason for bringing the said action in ^{less Judge} the Court, and in such case the plaintiff shall have judgment ^{at trial} to recover his costs of suit; or if when there is no verdict the ^{certify to} plaintiff shall make it appear to the satisfaction of the Court, ^{entitle} on summons, that there was a sufficient reason for bringing ^{plaintiff to} the said action in the Court, in such case the Court may by ^{costs, or} rule or order direct that the plaintiff shall recover his costs, ^{the Court} and thereupon the plaintiff shall have judgment to recover his ^{make an} costs accordingly (p. 131). ^{order for} ^{plaintiff to} ^{have costs.}

England or
Wales. 13. The Court may, if it shall think fit, in any case when it shall satisfactorily appear by affidavit that the cause of action arises within the jurisdiction of the Court, order that the plaint may be served in any part of England or Wales; and the service of any plaint in pursuance of such order shall be as valid and effectual as if the same had been served within the jurisdiction of the Court, provided that a copy of such order shall be served at the time of the service of the plaint (pp. 6, 59).

All further proceedings to be had as usual. 14. In all cases where an order of the Court shall be made under the last preceding section, all the proceedings in the cause shall be had and taken as if the defendant had been duly served with the plaint within the jurisdiction (p. 72).

Objection
to jurisdiction to be by plea. 15. No defendant shall be permitted to object to the jurisdiction of the Court in or by any proceeding whatsoever, except by plea (pp. 7, 8, 9, 12, 13, 15, 16, 25, 63, 137, 142).

Causes
under £50

removed except by Judge's order or on security. 16. No cause depending in the Mayor's Court in which the debt or damages sought to be recovered shall not exceed fifty pounds shall be removed by any defendant before judgment therein into any Superior Court, except in pursuance of a Judge's order, as hereinafter mentioned, unless the defendant, with two sufficient sureties, such as the Mayor's Court shall allow, shall first be bound to the plaintiff in the cause by recognizance, to be acknowledged in the Mayor's Court, in a sufficient sum for the payment of the debt or damages and costs in case judgment shall pass against the defendant in the Superior Court, or in case the cause shall be brought back by procedendo in the Mayor's Court: provided always, that any Judge of any of the Superior Courts may in the exercise of his discretion order a writ of certiorari to issue to remove any such cause depending in the Mayor's Court into any Superior Court without such recognizance as aforesaid, and such cause may be removed into such Superior Court accordingly (pp. 104, 105).

Writ to 17. No cause depending in the Mayor's Court shall be removed before judgment therein into any Superior Court, unless the writ removing such cause shall have been lodged with the proper officer of the Court within one month after the service of the plaint, or unless such writ shall have been lodged with such officer before such action shall have been entered for trial according to the practice of the Mayor's Court (p. 104).

remove causes to be lodged within one month after service of plaint.

18. No foreign attachment shall be removed from the Mayor's Court at any time after the same shall be set down for trial except by the express order of one of the Judges of the Superior Courts, and then upon such terms as to costs, bail, or payment of money into Court as such Judge on summons shall think fit ; provided that a summons only, without any order of the Judge thereon, shall not stay the trial of the attachment in the Mayor's Court.

Foreign attachment not to be removed after set down for trial, except by express directions of Judge upon terms.

19. No cause depending in the Court shall, before judgment be recovered, be removable into any of the Superior Courts (after plea pleaded), unless by leave of a Judge of one of the said Superior Courts in cases which shall appear to such Judge fit to be tried in one of the Superior Courts, and upon such terms, if any, as to payment of costs, giving security for debt and costs, or damages and costs, or such other terms as he shall think fit, upon summons (p. 106).

No cause to be removed into Superior Court except by leave of Judge, and upon certain terms.

20. No suit commenced on the equity side of the Mayor's Court shall be removed from out of the said Court into Chancery without the special order of the Lord High Chancellor, the Master of the Rolls, or one of the Vice-Chancellors, upon application for that purpose made ; and no cause shall be so removed from out of the said equity side of the Mayor's Court if the Judge to whom such application shall be made shall consider that the matter in question in the said suit is fit to be tried in the Mayor's Court ; and the said Master of the Rolls shall have power from time to time to make rules and regulations respecting the removal of such suits as aforesaid (pp. 62, 63).

No suit on equity side of Court to be removed unless by special direction of Judge.

21. In any action or other legal proceeding in the Court, the Court may, on application made for such purpose by either party, compel the opposite party to allow the party making the application to inspect all documents in the custody or power or under the control of such opposite party relating to such action or other legal proceeding, and if necessary to take examined copies of the same, or to procure the same to be duly stamped in all cases in which, previous to the passing of this Act, a discovery might have been obtained by filing a Bill, or by any other proceeding in a Court of Equity at the instance of the party so making application as aforesaid to the Court.

Power to the Judge, within the jurisdiction to hear and determine motions, &c.

22. The Judge of the Court may at any time, within the jurisdiction of the Court, hear and grant applications for rules to show cause in arrest of judgment, or for judgment non obstante veredicto, or for a repleader, or for granting new trials, and for entering nonsuits and verdicts in causes pending in the Court (p. 128).

Power to Court to amend errors.

23. It shall be lawful for the Court at all times to amend all defects and errors in any proceeding, whether there is anything in writing to amend by or not, and whether the defect or error be that of the party applying to amend or not; and all such amendments as may be necessary for the purpose of determining in the existing suit the real question in controversy between the parties shall be so made; and all such amendments may be made with or without costs, or upon such terms as to the Court may seem fit (p. 125).

Depositions of witnesses may be taken.

24. The Court may in any action, upon the application of any of the parties thereto, order the examination on oath, upon interrogatories or otherwise, before the Registrar or other person or persons to be named in such order, of any witness or witnesses in any part of England and Wales, and by the same or any subsequent order or orders may give all such directions touching the time, place, and manner of examination, and all other matters and circumstances connected with such examination, as may appear reasonable and just.

As to compelling attendances of witnesses, production of documents, &c.

25. When any such order shall be made the Court may, in and by the first or any subsequent order, command the attendance of any person to be named in such order for the purpose of being examined, or the production of any writing or other document to be mentioned in such order, and may direct the attendance of any such person to be at his own place of abode or elsewhere, if necessary or convenient so to do; and the party at whose instance such order may have been made and issued shall have all the same remedies against such person, in case of non-attendance, as he would have against any person for non-attendance in obedience to any writ of subpœna ad testificandum duly served according to the practice of the Court: provided that, in addition to the service of the order, an appointment of the time and place of attendance in obedience thereto, signed by the person or persons appointed to take the examination, or by one or more of such persons, shall be so served, together with or after the service of such order: provided also, that every person whose attendance shall be so required shall be entitled to the like conduct money, and payment for expenses and loss of time, as upon attendance at a trial: provided also, that no person shall be compelled to produce under any such order any writing or other document that he would not be compellable to produce at a trial of the cause.

26. Upon the application of any of the parties to any action depending in the Court, the Court may order a commission to issue for the examination of witnesses upon oath at any place or places beyond the limits of England and Wales, by interrogatories or otherwise, and by the same or any subsequent order or orders may give all such directions touching the time, place, and manner of such examination, and all other matters and circumstances connected with such examination, as may appear reasonable and just. Commission may be issued by Judge of the Court to examine witnesses abroad.

27. Any sheriff, gaoler, or other officer having the custody of any prisoner may take such prisoner for examination at the place or places named in any such order by virtue of a writ of habeas corpus to be issued for that purpose, which writ shall and may be issued by any Judge under such circumstances and in such manner as such Judge may now by law issue the writ commonly called a writ of habeas corpus ad testificandum. upon the oath of the witnesses, to be administered by the person so authorised; and if upon such oath any person making the same shall wilfully and corruptly give any false evidence, every person so offending shall be deemed and taken to be guilty of perjury, and shall and may be indicted and prosecuted for such offence in the county where such evidence shall be given, or in the county of Middlesex if the evidence be given out of England.

The person appointed for taking examinations may report to the Court.

29. The Registrar or any other person named in any such rule or order to take any examination in pursuance thereof may and he is hereby required to make, if need be, a special report to the Court touching such examination, and the conduct or absence of any witness or other person thereon or relating thereto; and the Court is hereby authorized to institute such proceedings and make such order and orders upon such report as justice may require, and as may be instituted and made in any case of contempt of court.

Costs of order and proceedings.

30. The costs of every rule or order to be made for the examination of witnesses by virtue of the provisions herein contained, and of the proceedings thereupon, shall be costs in the cause, unless otherwise directed either by the Judge of the Superior Court making such order or by the Court.

Restrictions as to reading depositions.

31. No examination or deposition to be taken by virtue of the provisions herein contained shall be read in evidence without the consent of the party against whom the same may be offered, unless it shall appear to the satisfaction of the Court that the examinant or deponent is not in England or Wales, or is dead, or unable from permanent sickness or other permanent infirmity to attend the trial, in all or any of which cases the examinations and depositions, certified under the hand of the commissioner, registrar, or other person taking the same, shall and may, without proof of the signature to such certificate, be received and read in evidence, saving all just exceptions.

Interpleader by defendant in action.

32. Upon application made by or on behalf of any defendant in any action in the Court, such application being made after declaration and before plea, by affidavit or otherwise, showing that such defendant does not claim any interest in the subject matter of the suit, but that the right thereto is claimed or supposed to belong to some third party who has sued or is expected to sue for the same, and that such defendant does not in any manner collude with such third party, but is ready to bring into Court or to pay or dispose of the subject matter of the action in such a manner as the Court may order or direct, it shall be lawful for the registrar to issue a summons calling upon such third party to appear in Court, and to state the nature and particulars of his claim, and to maintain or relinquish his claim, which summons may be served upon such third party in any part of England or Wales; and upon such summons the Court may hear the allegations as well of such third party as of the plaintiff, and in the meantime stay the proceedings in such action, and finally order such third party to make himself defendant in the same or some other action, or to proceed to trial on one or more issue or issues, and also direct which of the parties shall be plaintiff or defendant on such trial, or, with the consent of the plaintiff and such third party, their counsel or attorneys, dispose of the merits of their claims, and determine the same in a summary manner, and make such rules and orders therein as to costs and all other matters as may appear to be just and reasonable (pp. 6, 60, 110).

33. The judgment in any action or issue as may be decreed by the Court, and the decision of the Court in a summary manner, shall be final and conclusive against the parties, and all persons claiming by, from, or under them (pp. 60, 111).

Judgment
sion final.

34. If such third party shall not appear upon such summons to maintain or relinquish the claim, being duly served therewith, or shall neglect or refuse to comply with any rule or order to be made after appearance, it shall be lawful for the Court to declare such third party, and all persons claiming by, from, or under him, to be for ever barred from prosecuting his claim against the original defendant, his executors or administrators, saving nevertheless the right or claim of such third party against the plaintiff, and thereupon to make such order between such defendant and the plaintiff as

of Ser-jeant-at-Mace in execution of process against goods.

35. When any claim shall be made to or in respect of any goods or chattels taken or intended to be taken in execution under the process of the Court, or to or in respect of the proceeds or value thereof, by any landlord for rent, or by any person not being the party against whom such process has issued, it shall be lawful to and for the Registrar, upon application of the Serjeant-at-Mace or any of his officers, made before or after the return of such process, and as well before as after any action brought against such Serjeant-at-Mace or any of his officers, to issue a summons calling before the Court as well the party issuing such process as the party making such claim, and thereupon any action which shall have been brought in any of the Superior Courts, or in any local or inferior Court of Record, in respect of such claim, shall be stayed; and the Court in which such action shall have been brought, or any Judge thereof, on proof of the issue of such summons, and that the goods and chattels were so taken in execution, may order the party bringing such action to pay the costs of all proceedings had upon such action after the issue of such summons; and the said Court shall thereupon exercise, for the adjustments of such claim, and the relief and protection of the said Serjeant-at-Mace or any of his officers, all or any of the powers and authorities hereinbefore contained, and make such rules and decisions as shall appear to be just, according to the circumstances of the case; and the costs of all such proceedings shall be in the discretion of the Court (p. 112).

Creditor

STATUTORY ENACTMENTS AFFECTING APPEALS FROM THE MAYOR'S COURT.1. Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873.

Section 45. All appeals from Petty or Quarter Sessions, from a County Court, or from any other Inferior Court, which might before the passing of this Act have been brought to any Court or Judge whose jurisdiction is transferred to the High Court of Justice, may be heard and determined by Divisional Courts of the said High Court of Justice consisting respectively of such of the Judges thereof as may, from time to time, be assigned for that purpose pursuant to Rules of Court, or subject to Rules of Court as may be so assigned according to arrangements made for the purpose by the Judges of the said High Court. The determination of such appeals respectively by such Divisional Courts shall be final, unless special leave to appeal from the same to the Court of Appeal shall be given by the Divisional Court by which any such appeal from an Inferior Court shall have been heard (pp. 98, 99).

2. Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1875.

Section 15. It shall be lawful for her Majesty, from time to time, by Order in Council, to direct that the enactments relating to appeals from County Courts shall apply to any other inferior Court of record; and those enactments, subject to any exceptions, conditions, and limitations contained in the Order, shall apply accordingly as from the date mentioned in the Order (p. 101).

3. Appellate Jurisdiction Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 59).

RULES FOR JUDGMENT SUMMONSES IN THE MAYOR'S COURT.

It is ordered that, on and after the 1st day of January, 1870, the following Rules shall be in force for regulating the practice in respect of the powers vested in the Mayor's Court of London by the first part of the Debtors' Act, 1869.

1. Any judgment debtor may be summoned at the request of a judgment creditor, which request shall be in form No. I.
2. The summons shall be in form No. II.
3. The service of every summons, whenever it is practicable, shall be personal service ; but if it appear to the Judge or his Deputy that reasonable efforts have been made to effect personal service, and either that the summons has come to the knowledge of the debtor, or that he wilfully evades service, an order may be made as if personal service had been effected, upon such terms as the Judge or his Deputy may think fit.

4. The order shall be in form No. III.
5. The committal shall be in form No. IV.
6. Except by special leave of the Judge or his Deputy, no commitment for non-payment of any sum shall be issued without notice being given or sent to the debtor that such commitment has been ordered, but such notice need only be sent to the debtor by post or otherwise, without personal service.
7. Proof of such notice having been sent may be made by affidavit, and such affidavit must set out the particulars of how and when such notice has been sent.
8. Proof of the means of the debtor may be made orally or by affidavit, or if it appears to the Judge or his Deputy, either before or at the hearing or any adjournment thereof, that a voir dire examination of the debtor or of any other person, or the production of any book or document, is expedient or necessary, an order may be made commanding the attendance of such person, or the production of such book or document. The disobedience to any such order shall be deemed a contempt of Court, and punishable accordingly.
9. The hearing of any summons may be adjourned, if the Judge or his Deputy shall think fit, to a day and time to be named, and if the debtor shall have appeared on the day on which it is adjourned, no further notice thereof shall be required of such adjournment; but if the debtor shall not have appeared, then notice of such adjournment shall be sent to the debtor.
10. Upon every commitment shall appear the amount of the debt or the instalments due, and for the non-payment of which the debtor is committed.
11. Upon payment of the sum mentioned in the commitment, as in Rule 10, together with the fees of the Court and Serjeant-at-Law, the debtor shall be entitled to his discharge.

12. The Governor of the Debtors' Prison may receive the sum mentioned in the commitment, together with the fees, as in Rules 10 and 11, and thereupon, or upon certificate of the Serjeant-at-Mace, or his Deputy, that the same has been satisfied, may discharge the debtor.
13. No commitment shall be in force concurrently with a writ of fi. fa. for the same debt.
14. The judgment record or order upon which the debtor is summoned shall be produced in Court at the hearing of any summons.
15. The costs of the summons and commitment and of any writ of fi. fa. issued on the judgment or of any previous summons or summonses, not served by reason of the debtor having evaded service, shall be in the discretion of the Court, and ordered at the hearing of the case.

35 & 36 Vict. c. 86.

THE BOROUGH AND LOCAL COURTS OF RECORD ACT, 1872.

By an Act (passed August 10, 1872) to amend the law relating to Borough and other Local Courts of Record in England and Wales some of the provisions of the M. C. L. P. Act were modified as follows:—Section 4 enabled two or more Courts to be held at the same time, either for trial of issues or for ordinary proceedings. Section 5 enabled affidavits sworn before any Commissioner or other authorized person to be used in the Mayor's Court without verification of the signature (ante, p. 128). Section 6 enabled the Mayor's Court to send writs of execution, in all cases where there is a judgment or order for not more than £20, to any County Court, within the jurisdiction of which the defendant may possess any goods or chattels, for execution by the High Bailiff of such County Court.

The only other section of the Act itself that touched the Mayor's Court was the 7th, which empowered the Judge to appoint a Deputy subject to the conditions imposed by an Order in Council. Those conditions (as laid down in an Order in Council, dated June 26, 1873) were that the Deputy Judge was to be appointed under an instrument under the hand of the Judge specifying the duties he was to perform, the reason for appointing him, and the time for which he was appointed. The appointment was to have the approval of the Lord Chancellor in writing, and also of the Mayor, Aldermen and Commons of the City of London under the hand of their Town Clerk.

By another Order in Council of the same date several clauses of the Schedule to the above Act were extended and applied to the Mayor's Court, subject to certain alterations and modifications. This extension was guarded by a proviso that the powers given by clause 2 (of Schedule to Act) should in every case be exercised either by the Judge himself or by a Deputy or Assistant Judge duly appointed, under the 7th section of the Act or otherwise, such Deputy, &c., being a barrister of not less than seven years' standing. It was further provided and ordered that the powers and duties incident to the provisions extended to the Mayor's Court and exercisable by "the Court or a Judge" should and might, with regard to matters in that Court, be exercised by the Judge of the Mayor's Court, or (save as aforesaid) by his duly appointed Deputy. The following is a summary of the clauses of the Schedule directed to apply to this Court:—

Clause 1 explains the construction of the words "Court," "Judge," "Superior Courts," as used in the Schedule.

Clause 2 enables the Judge to hear motions and make orders out of Court, and outside the limits of the local jurisdiction. (Extension of s. 22 of M. C. L. P. Act, 1857).

Clause 9 provides that wherever a final judgment is obtained for £20, exclusive of costs, or wherever an order is made for payment of £20, on such judgment or order duly signed and sealed being produced to any Judge of the Superior Courts, he may direct the same (or a copy thereof verified by affidavit) to be filed with the clerk of the judgments of one of the Superior Courts, whereupon the same becomes of the same effect for all purposes as a judgment or order of such Superior Court.

Clause 10 empowers a Judge of the Superior Courts, on application by any party to "any such action" depending in the Mayor's Court, to order a commission to issue for the examination of witnesses at any place or places beyond the limits of England and Wales.

Clause 11 gives the Mayor's Court Judge power to order a nonsuit whenever he is not satisfied by the evidence that either plaintiff or defendant is entitled to judgment, and also to order a new trial in every case on such terms as he shall think reasonable, and to stay proceedings in the meantime.

Clause 12 prohibits the removal before judgment of any action entered in the Mayor's Court into a Superior Court by any writ or process except by leave of a Superior Court Judge, which he may give where he thinks the case fit to be tried in a Superior Court, the terms being in his discretion. (Omits the term "after plea pleaded" contained in s. 19 of M. C. L. P. Act, 1857).

"Mr. Butlin devotes entire chapters to the consideration of Williams on Real Property, Haynes on Equity, and Chitty on Contracts, in their bearings upon the studies of the articulated clerk, and his recommendations as to thoroughness of reading are very sound."—Law Magazine, February, 1878.

"A sensible and useful guide for the legal tyro."—Solicitors' Journal, April 21, 1877.

"In supplying law students with materials for preparing themselves for examination, Mr. Butlin, we think, has distanced all competitors. The volume before us contains hints on reading, a very neat summary of law which the best read practitioner need not despise. There are time tables under the Judicature Act, and an excellent tabular arrangement of leading cases, which will be found of great service . . . Tuition of this kind will do much to remove obstacles which present themselves to commencing students, and when examinations are over the book is one which may be usefully kept close at hand, and will well repay 'noting up.'"—Law Times, February 24, 1877.

"At present this is by far the best book upon the Law of Contract possessed by the Profession, and it is a thoroughly practical book."—Law Times.

Leake on Contracts.—An Elementary Digest of the Law of Contracts (being a new edition of "The Elements of the Law of Contracts"). By STEPHEN MARTIN LEAKE, Barrister-at-Law. 1 vol. Demy 8vo. 1878. 1l. 18s.

Pollock's Principles of Contract at Law and in Equity; being a Treatise on the General Principles relating to the Validity of Agreements, with a special view to the comparison of Law and Equity, and with references to the Indian Contract Act, and occasionally to American and Foreign Law. Second Edition. By FREDERICK POLLOCK, of Lincoln's Inn, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Demy 8vo. 1878. 1l. 6s.

The Lord Chief Justice in his judgment in Metropolitan Railway Company v. Bagnall and others, said, "The Law is well put by Mr. Frederick Pollock in his very able and learned work on Contracts."—The Times.

"For the purposes of the student there is no book equal to Mr. Pollock's."—The Economist, July 13, 1878.

"He has succeeded in writing a book on Contracts which the working lawyer will find as useful for reference as any of its predecessors, and which at the same time will give the student what he will seek for in vain elsewhere, a complete rationale of the law."—Law Magazine and Review.

"We see nothing to qualify in the praise we bestowed on the first edition. The chapters on unlawful and impossible agreements are models of full and clear treatment."—Solicitors' Journal, Aug. 10, 1878.

Smith's Law of Contracts.—By the late J. W. SMITH, Esq., Author of "Leading Cases," &c. Seventh Edition. By VINCENT T. THOMPSON, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Demy 8vo. 1878. (Selected for the Intermediate Examinations, 1879.) 1l. 1s.

"We know of few books equally likely to benefit the student, or marked by such distinguished qualities of lucidity, order, and accuracy as the work before us."—Solicitors' Journal, December 28, 1878.

CONVICTIONS.—Paley on Summary Convictions.—Fifth Edition. By H. T. J. MACNAMARA, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. 8vo. 1866.

Stone.—Vide "Petty Sessions."

CONVEYANCING.—Dart.—Vide "Vendors and Purchasers."

Greenwood's Manual of Conveyancing.—A Manual of the Practice of Conveyancing, showing the present Practice relating to the daily routine of Conveyancing in Solicitors' Offices. To which are added Concise Common Forms and Precedents in Conveyancing; Conditions of Sale, Conveyances, and all other Assurances in constant use. Fifth Edition. By H. N. CAPEL, B.A., LL.B., Solicitor. Demy 8vo. 1877. 15s.

"The information under these heads is just of that ordinary practical kind which is learned from experience and is not to be gathered from treatises. A careful study of these pages would probably arm a diligent clerk with as much useful knowledge as he might otherwise take years of desultory questioning and observing to acquire."—Solicitors' Journal.

"The young solicitor will find this work almost invaluable, while the members of the higher branch of the profession may refer to it with advantage. We have not met with any book that furnishes so simple a guide to the management of business entrusted to articulated clerks."—Sheffield Post.

Martin's Student's Conveyancer.—A Manual on the Principles of Modern Conveyancing, illustrated and enforced by a Collection of Precedents, accompanied by detailed Remarks. Part I. Purchase Deeds. By THOMAS FREDERIC MARTIN, Solicitor. Demy 8vo. 1877. 5s. 6d.

"We have no doubt that the student will find in Mr. Martin's treatise a good guide to the practical part of conveyancing."—Law Times, June 23, 1877.

"It should be placed in the hands of every student."

Palmer's Company Precedents.—Conveyancing and other Forms and Precedents relating to Companies' incorporated under the Companies' Acts, 1862 and 1867. Arranged as follows:—Agreements, Memoranda of Association, Articles of Association, Resolutions, Notices, Certificates, Provisional Orders of Board of Trade, Debentures, Reconstruction, Amalgamation, Petitions, Orders. With Copious Notes. By FRANCIS BEAUFORT PALMER, of the Inner Temple, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Demy 8vo. 1877. 1l. 5s.

"There had never, to our knowledge, been any attempt to collect and edit a body of Forms and Precedents exclusively relating to the formation, working and winding-up of companies. This task Mr. Palmer has taken in hand, and we are glad to say with much success. . . . The information contained in the 660 pages of the volume is rendered easily accessible by a good and full index. The author has evidently not been sparing of labour, and the fruits of his exertions are now before the legal profession in a work of great practical utility."—Law Magazine, February, 1878.

"To those concerned in getting up companies, the assistance given by Mr. Palmer must be very valuable, because he does not confine himself to bare precedents, but by intelligent and learned commentary lights up, as it were, each step that he takes. The volume before us is not, therefore a book of precedents merely, but, in a greater or less degree, a treatise on certain portions of the Companies' Acts of 1862 and 1867. There is an elaborate index, and the work is one which must commend itself to the profession."—Law Times, June 9, 1877.

"The precedents are as a rule exceedingly well drafted, and adapted to companies for almost every conceivable object. So especially are the forms of memoranda and articles of association; and these will be found extremely serviceable to the conveyancer. . . . All the notes have been elaborated with a thoroughly scientific knowledge of the principles of company law, as well as with copious references to the cases substantiating the principles. . . . We venture to predict that his notes will be found of great utility in guiding opinions on many complicated questions of law and practice."—Law Journal.

Prideaux's Precedents in Conveyancing.—With Dissertations on its Law and Practice. Ninth Edition. By FREDERICK PRIDEAUX, late Professor of the Law of Real and Personal Property to the Inns of Court, and JOHN WHITCOMBE, Esq., Barristers-at-Law. 2 vols. Royal 8vo. 1879. 3l. 10s.

"Prideaux has become an indispensable part of the Conveyancer's library."—Solicitors' Journal.

"We really can hardly imagine a conveyancer being required to prepare any instrument which he will not find sketched out in the work under notice. . . . We may also be allowed to add our tribute of praise to these Precedents for their conciseness, perspicuity, precision, and perfection of drafting."—Law Journal.

"The volumes are now something more than a mere collection of precedents; they contain most valuable dissertations on the law and practice with reference to conveyancing. These dissertations are followed by the precedents on each subject dealt with, and are in themselves condensed treatises, embodying all the latest case and statute law. We may instance, as excellent specimens of legal essay writing, the dissertations on trustees and husband and wife in the second volume, and on conditions of sale in the first. Having regard to the wide general knowledge required of all lawyers in the present day, such a work as this must prove highly acceptable to the whole Profession."—Law Times, January 4, 1879.

Greaves' Criminal Law Consolidation and Amendment Acts of the 24 & 25 Vict.—With Notes, Observations, and Forms for Summary Proceedings. By CHARLES SPRENGEL GREAVES, Esq., one of Her Majesty's Counsel, who prepared the Bills and attended the Select Committees of both Houses of Parliament to which the Bills were referred. Second Edition. Post 8vo. 1862. 16s.

Roscoe's Digest of the Law of Evidence in Criminal Cases.—Ninth Edition. By HORACE SMITH, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Royal 12mo. 1878. 1l. 11s. 6d.

Russell's Treatise on Crimes and Misdemeanors.—Fifth Edition. By SAMUEL PRENTICE, Esq., one of Her Majesty's Counsel. 3 vols. Royal 8vo. 1877. 5l. 15s. 6d.

This treatise is so much more copious than any other upon all the subjects contained in it, that it affords by far the best means of acquiring a knowledge of the Criminal Law in general, or of any offence in particular; so that it will be found peculiarly useful as well to those who wish to obtain a complete knowledge of that law, as to those who desire to be informed on any portion of it as occasion may require.

This work also contains a very complete treatise on the Law of Evidence in Criminal Cases, and in it the manner of taking the depositions of witnesses, and the examinations of prisoners before magistrates, is fully explained.

"What better Digest of Criminal Law could we possibly hope for than 'Russell on Crimes'?"—Sir James Fitzjames Stephen's Speech on Codification.

"We may safely assert that the fifth edition of 'Russell on Crimes' has, under the careful hand of Mr. Prentice, fully reached the standard attained to by the preceding editions."—Law Journal, January 27, 1877.

"No more trustworthy authority, or more exhaustive expositor than 'Russell' can be consulted."—Law Magazine and Review, February, 1877.

"Alterations have been made in the arrangement of the work which without interfering with the general plan are sufficient to show that great care and thought have been bestowed . . . We are amazed at the patience, industry and skill which are exhibited in the collection and arrangement of all this mass of learning."—The Times.

The Diary, printed on JOYNSON'S paper of superior quality, contains memoranda of Legal Business throughout the Year.

The Lawyer's Companion for 1879, edited by JOHN THOMPSON, of the Inner Temple, Esq., Barrister-at-Law; and contains a Digest of Recent Cases on Costs; Monthly Diary of County, Local Government, and Parish Business; Oaths in Supreme Court; Summary of Legislation of 1878; Alphabetical Index to the Practical Statutes; a Copious Table of Stamp Duties; Legal Time, Interest, Discount, Income, Wages and other Tables; Probate, Legacy and Succession Duties; and a variety of matters of practical utility.

"An excellent work" The Times, November, 29, 1878.

"A publication which has long ago secured to itself the favour of the profession, and which, as heretofore, justifies by its contents the title assumed by it."—Law Journal.

"Contains all the information which could be looked for in such a work, and gives it in a most convenient form and very completely. We may unhesitatingly recommend the work to our readers."—Solicitors' Journal.

"The 'Lawyer's Companion and Diary' is a book that ought to be in the possession of every lawyer, and of every man of business."

"The 'Lawyer's Companion' is, indeed, what it is called, for it combines everything required for reference in the lawyer's office."—Law Times.

"It is a book without which no lawyer's library or office can be complete."—Irish Law Times, November 9th, 1878.

DICTIONARY.—Wharton's Law Lexicon.—A Dictionary of Jurisprudence, explaining the Technical Words and Phrases employed in the several Departments of English Law; including the various Legal Terms used in Commercial Transactions. Together with an Explanatory as well as Literal Translation of the Latin Maxims contained in the Writings of the Ancient and Modern Commentators. Sixth Edition. Enlarged and revised in accordance with the Judicature Acts, by J. SHIRESS WILL, of the Middle Temple, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Super royal 8vo. 1876. 2l. 2s.

"As a work of reference for the library, the handsome and elaborate edition of 'Wharton's Law Lexicon' which Mr. Shiress Will has produced, must supersede all former issues of that well-known work."—Law Magazine and Review, August, 1876.

"No law library is complete without a law dictionary or law lexicon. To the practitioner it is always useful to have at hand a book where, in a small compass, he can find an explanation of terms of infrequent occurrence, or obtain a reference to statutes on most subjects, or to books wherein particular subjects are treated of at full length. To the student it is almost indispensable."—Law Times.

MAY, Esq.; continued by JAMES EASTWICK, of Lincoln's Inn, Esq., Barristers-at-Law. In 2 vols. Royal 8vo. Vol. I. and Vol. II. Part I. 1877—79. Each 1l. 10s.

Volume I. contains:—Judgment by Default and at Trial; Motion for Judgment; Transfer and Payment of Funds into and out of Court; Proceedings in Chambers; Discovery and Production; Injunctions; Stop Orders and Charging Orders; Ne Exeat Attachment of Debts; Transfer and Consolidation of Actions; Prohibition Patents; Interpleader; Issues; Referees and Arbitration Receivers; Trustees (including Trustees Act); Charities; Orders affecting Solicitors; and Taxation of Bills of Costs, &c. &c.

Volume II. Part I. contains:—Married Women; Infants; Administration of Real and Personal Estate; Partition and Sale under the Partition Acts, 1668, 1876; Mortgages; Principal and Surety; Partnership; Settlements; Specific Relief; and Sales by the Court. Part II., completing the work, is in the Press, and will be published shortly.

"The editors of this new edition of Seton deserve much praise for what is almost, if not absolutely, an innovation in law books. In treating of any division of their subject, they have put prominently forward the result of the latest decisions settling the law, so far as it is ascertained, thus avoiding much useless reference to older cases. . . . There can be no doubt that in a book of practice like Seton, it is much more important to be able to see at once what the law is, than to know how it has become what it is; and the editors have evidently taken great pains to carry out this principle in presenting the law on each division of their labours to their readers."—The Times.

"Cannot fail to commend itself to practitioners. Nothing need be said as to the value of the work, which is one of settled authority, and we have only to congratulate the profession upon the fact that this edition comes out under circumstances peculiarly calculated to enhance its value."—Law Times, February 24, 1877.

"The impression derived from our perusal of the book is that it represents the result of conscientious and intelligent labour on the part of the editors, and we think it deserves, and will obtain, the confidence of the profession."—Solicitors' Journal, April 7, 1877.

"Mr. Boyd, the latest editor, has added many useful notes; he has inserted in the Appendix public documents of permanent value, and there is the prospect that, as edited by Mr. Boyd, Mr. Wheaton's volume will enter on a new lease of life. . . . It is all the more important that their works (Kent and Wheaton) should be edited by intelligent and impartial Englishmen, such as Dr. Abdy, the editor of Kent, and Mr. Boyd,"—The Times, January 1, 1879.

"Both the plan and execution of the work before us deserves commendation. Mr. Boyd gives prominence to the labours of others. The text of Wheaton is presented without alteration, and Mr. Dana's numbering of the sections is preserved. Mr. Boyd's notes, which are numerous, original, and copious, are conveniently interspersed throughout the text; but they are in a distinct type, and therefore the reader always knows whether he is reading Wheaton or Boyd. The Index, which could not have been compiled without much thought and labour makes the book handy for reference, and, consequently, valuable to public writers, who in these days have frequently to refer to International Law. A new appendix contains the English and American statute law of naturalization, extradition, and foreign enlistment; the English Naval Prize Act; the Treaty of Washington; and extracts from treaties relating to the Black Sea, the Dardanelles and Bosphorus, and Turkish Affairs. This appendix will be a mine of coined gold to the gentlemen who enlighten our darkness in the leading article columns of the newspapers . . . for general purposes, Mr. Boyd's notes are so full as to obviate the necessity of reference to other works."—Law Journal, April 18, 1878.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION.

In the present edition, the general arrangement adopted in the former edition is preserved.

The several Acts, Bodies of Rules, Orders in Council, and other authoritative documents issued since the date of the former edition, are printed in the present. The Rules of Court subsequent to the Act of 1875 are incorporated with those contained in the Schedule to that Act.

All the more important decisions upon the construction of the Acts and Rules down to the end of the Michaelmas Sittings, 1877, will, I believe, be found noticed with some of later date.

All the Rules of Court, both those in the Schedule and those of later date, have been issued without marginal notes. I have ventured to add short marginal notes to them.

I cannot too strongly express my obligations to Mr. Biddle, of the Master of the Rolls' Chambers, for his assistance in the preparation of this edition. The whole book has been revised by him; and I have throughout received from him very valuable suggestions. He has also relieved me of much labour by revising and annotating the forms annexed to the rules, and in many other ways.

I wish particularly to notice the Table of Cases, which Mr. Biddle has prepared. The course ordinarily adopted throughout the book is to cite each case with a reference to only one report of it, except where there appeared special reason for referring to another. The Law Reports are commonly cited where the case has appeared in that series. To have mentioned in the body of the work every report of each case would have been a cumbrous and I think an inconvenient plan. On the other hand, many practitioners use series of reports other than those commonly cited in this Book. To meet the difficulty thus arising, the Table of Cases gives a reference to all the reports of each case cited.

The reconstruction of the Index, rendered necessary by the large amount of new matter, has been kindly undertaken by my learned friend, Mr. Harry Greenwood, of the Chancery Bar.

"As regards Mr. Wilson's notes, we can only say that they are indispensable to the proper understanding of the new system of procedure. They treat the principles upon which the alterations are based with a clearness and breadth of view which have never been equalled or even approached by any other commentator. . . . The table of cases, containing a reference to each series of reports, which Mr. Biddle has prefixed to the work, is a valuable feature."—Solicitors' Journal, April 20, 1878.

"Mr. Wilson has bestowed upon this edition an amount of industry and care which the Bench and the Profession will, we are sure, gratefully acknowledge. . . . A conspicuous and important feature in this second edition is a table of cases prepared by Mr. Biddle, in which not only are cases given with references to two or three reports, but every place in which the cases are reported. . . . Wilson's 'Judicature Acts,' is now the latest, and we think it is the most convenient of the works of the same class.

The practitioner will find that it supplies all his wants."—Law Times, March 23, 1878.

"The special success of Mr. Arthur Wilson in dealing with the Rules of Court which we pointed out on the first appearance of his valuable work, continues to be a distinguishing feature of the second edition."—Law Magazine, May, 1878.
